Growth of Water Dams and its Impacts on Domestic Security

On Saturday, President Ghani once again emphasized on the management and control of the country’s frontier waters on a visit to the Farah province. The president especially spoke about Baloch National Unit (BNU), located near the far eastern border, and emphasized that the Afghan government is serious about the construction of this dam. One of the important features of the president has been his special attention to water issues and construction of industrial infrastructure. Since the day he has occupied the presidency of Afghanistan, he has paid serious attention to these issues. The construction of industrial infrastructure has dramatically improved in recent years. The question that comes to mind is about the impact of these measures on Afghan national security. In recent years it is clear that the neighboring countries have always benefited from the crisis and weakness of Afghanistan and even there are people who think that the distant future, whether in neighbors or international, will be in favor of the dish. Some of the most important points that need to be taken into account when managing the water, the fundamental question is how will this status of the president and the government continue throughout the country of the currency? This question is important because it seems that neighboring countries have been trying to prevent Afghanistan from control of water. In Hindu Kush, Balochistan, and other rivers over the past years.

If we think of a superficially, the content and management of the country’s waters will have a negative impact on national security because the neighboring countries will try to prevent Afghanistan from management and control of its water. This will create instability on the borders of the country like in previous years and they will help illegal armed groups to make Afghan insecurities. In the past, the Salima and Kajaki dams have always been subject to security and safety threats.

But if we want to think a bit longer and more strategically, Afghanistan can develop the capacity of its water resources. Based on the idea, the current government has proceeded to construct several dams in the country despite such concerns from the neighboring countries. The most obvious examples is Salma dam on the Kabul River. This is supposed to supply drinking water to the burgeoning population of Kabul City. But the question is how to make sure that all the unused waters that flow from Afghanistan. The Kabul River irrigates Pakistan and Afghanistan and in the absence of any water regulating mechanism and its Impacts

Growth of Water Dams and its Impacts on Domestic Security

T he world’s advanced economies are suffering from a number of deep-seated problems. In the United States, in particular, the American political system is up to the task of reform. Add Joseph E. Stiglitz

Market Concentration Is Threatening the US Economy

By Joseph E. Stiglitz

The world's advanced economies are suffering from a number of deep-seated problems. In the United States, in particular, the American political system is up to the task of reform. Add Joseph E. Stiglitz

By: Hujjatullah Zia

Afghan Women’s Achievements Undeniable

Hujjatullah Zia is the permanent writer of the Daily Outlook Afghanistan. He can be reached at zia_hujjat@yahoo.com

By: Mona S. Benard

Women’s achievements are undeniable among the Taliban, which is now in power in Afghanistan. For example, a girl in the same age as mine used to read the same book, though the Taliban said that women had no rights to study. But we continued to do so as we knew that education is the key to our empowerment. We also knew that we were the builders of the future and we had the right to be educated. Today, women are now working in various fields, including politics, business, and education. They are no longer restricted to traditional roles in society. In fact, women now hold important positions in government and civil society. Women’s achievements are not only undeniable, but they also show the resilience and determination of Afghan women.

Women’s achievements are undeniable among the Taliban, which is now in power in Afghanistan. For example, a girl in the same age as mine used to read the same book, though the Taliban said that women had no rights to study. But we continued to do so as we knew that education is the key to our empowerment. We also knew that we were the builders of the future and we had the right to be educated. Today, women are now working in various fields, including politics, business, and education. They are no longer restricted to traditional roles in society. In fact, women now hold important positions in government and civil society. Women’s achievements are not only undeniable, but they also show the resilience and determination of Afghan women.

Women’s achievements are undeniable among the Taliban, which is now in power in Afghanistan. For example, a girl in the same age as mine used to read the same book, though the Taliban said that women had no rights to study. But we continued to do so as we knew that education is the key to our empowerment. We also knew that we were the builders of the future and we had the right to be educated. Today, women are now working in various fields, including politics, business, and education. They are no longer restricted to traditional roles in society. In fact, women now hold important positions in government and civil society. Women’s achievements are not only undeniable, but they also show the resilience and determination of Afghan women.

Women’s achievements are undeniable among the Taliban, which is now in power in Afghanistan. For example, a girl in the same age as mine used to read the same book, though the Taliban said that women had no rights to study. But we continued to do so as we knew that education is the key to our empowerment. We also knew that we were the builders of the future and we had the right to be educated. Today, women are now working in various fields, including politics, business, and education. They are no longer restricted to traditional roles in society. In fact, women now hold important positions in government and civil society. Women’s achievements are not only undeniable, but they also show the resilience and determination of Afghan women.

Women’s achievements are undeniable among the Taliban, which is now in power in Afghanistan. For example, a girl in the same age as mine used to read the same book, though the Taliban said that women had no rights to study. But we continued to do so as we knew that education is the key to our empowerment. We also knew that we were the builders of the future and we had the right to be educated. Today, women are now working in various fields, including politics, business, and education. They are no longer restricted to traditional roles in society. In fact, women now hold important positions in government and civil society. Women’s achievements are not only undeniable, but they also show the resilience and determination of Afghan women.

Women’s achievements are undeniable among the Taliban, which is now in power in Afghanistan. For example, a girl in the same age as mine used to read the same book, though the Taliban said that women had no rights to study. But we continued to do so as we knew that education is the key to our empowerment. We also knew that we were the builders of the future and we had the right to be educated. Today, women are now working in various fields, including politics, business, and education. They are no longer restricted to traditional roles in society. In fact, women now hold important positions in government and civil society. Women’s achievements are not only undeniable, but they also show the resilience and determination of Afghan women.

Women’s achievements are undeniable among the Taliban, which is now in power in Afghanistan. For example, a girl in the same age as mine used to read the same book, though the Taliban said that women had no rights to study. But we continued to do so as we knew that education is the key to our empowerment. We also knew that we were the builders of the future and we had the right to be educated. Today, women are now working in various fields, including politics, business, and education. They are no longer restricted to traditional roles in society. In fact, women now hold important positions in government and civil society. Women’s achievements are not only undeniable, but they also show the resilience and determination of Afghan women.