SEUL - South Korea aims to seek high-level talks with North Korea this month as preparations for a summit began on Friday, the presidential spokesman said, while officials in the South expressed interest in a separate summit in the United States.

If North Korea agrees to the talks, the South would hold its first North-South contact since a South Korean envoy was invited to attend a meeting with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un on Saturday. It was the first chance for North Korea to break its silence on the unexpected meetings with the South and the United States.

The talks would come after North Korea's top envoy to the United Nations, Kim Jong Nam, expressed his support for talks with the South.

Venezuela - Signatories to Iran nuclear deal meet in Vienna amid Trump's threat

VIENNA - Signatories to Iran's 2015 nuclear accord will hold talks in Vienna on Friday, just days after US President Donald Trump threatened to pull the United States out of the deal if Washington is not satisfied with its terms.

“Deepest concerns" - The New York Times reported in a news article that the US government might invoke WTO rules to force the EU to comply with its international obligations.

German Minister Questions Iran's Place in the Country

German Minister for Foreign Affairs Heiko Maas said that while Germany is committed to the deal, the country’s role in the abortive coup in Turkey should be considered.

Minister Maas also said that while the deal has been successful, it should not be allowed to overshadow the country's role in Europe.

North Korean Minister in Sweden amid Trump-Kim speculation

STOCKHOLM - North Korea's foreign minister visited Sweden last week, the media reported, as a possible sign that the isolated country is reaching out to Western democracies. North Korea's foreign minister, Ri Su-yong, visited Sweden earlier this week. Ri Su-yong is believed to have met with US Secretary of State John Kerry in Switzerland.

Trump's new interior minister in Germany said that US President Donald Trump will consider Iran to be a threat to the United States.

He also said that the US would consider its relationship with Iran to be a serious matter.

A trump administration official said that the US would consider its relationship with Iran to be a serious matter.

Christian Democrat, former US senator and now US ambassador to Germany, James Kelly, said that US President Donald Trump will consider Iran to be a threat to the United States.

After the US government’s decision to pull out of the nuclear deal, there was widespread concern in Europe that the US would not be able to secure the deal on its own. However, the US government has said that it will continue to work with the other signatories to the deal to ensure that it remains in place.

Despite the US decision, some European leaders have called for a new deal with Iran. The EU has already announced that it will keep its commitment to the deal.

Russian gas giant Gazprom announced on Monday that it had reached an agreement with the US government to supply gas to the US.

Gazprom said that it had reached an agreement with the US government to supply gas to the US.

Gazprom is one of the world's largest energy companies and is a major supplier of gas to Europe.

The agreement came after the US government announced that it would support the deal.

The US government has been pushing for a deal with Gazprom, which supplies gas to Europe, to help stabilize the gas market and reduce the risk of price volatility.

The US government has been pushing for a deal with Gazprom, which supplies gas to Europe, to help stabilize the gas market and reduce the risk of price volatility.

However, some European officials have expressed concern that the US deal could lead to higher gas prices in Europe.

The US government has been pushing for a deal with Gazprom, which supplies gas to Europe, to help stabilize the gas market and reduce the risk of price volatility.

The US government has been pushing for a deal with Gazprom, which supplies gas to Europe, to help stabilize the gas market and reduce the risk of price volatility.