Leaving No One Behind

There is one of the most important resources that human beings require to live: water. Life without water is impossible; therefore, it is necessary that human beings must have clean drinking water for themselves and ensure that the future generations will be able to access this important resource as well. Keeping in consideration the growing population of the world and the shrinking water resources it will be great challenge for human beings to ensure that they will have clean drinking water for all the human beings, as nearly billion people in the world already suffer from lack of clean drinking water.

To highlight the importance of water and its proper and sensible use, March 22 was celebrated as World Water Day worldwide. The theme for this year’s World Water Day was “Leaving No One Behind” to ensure that everyone, everywhere has access to safe drinking water resources as well. The theme for this year is correct because of the following reasons:

1. In the view of God, the Most Merciful, the Most Kind, water is one of the most important resources that human beings require to live. Life without water is impossible; therefore, it is necessary that human beings must have clean drinking water for themselves and ensure that the future generations will be able to access this important resource as well. Keeping in consideration the growing population of the world and the shrinking water resources it will be great challenge for human beings to ensure that they will have clean drinking water for all the human beings, as nearly billion people in the world already suffer from lack of clean drinking water.

2. To highlight the importance of water and its proper and sensible use, March 22 was celebrated as World Water Day worldwide. The theme for this year’s World Water Day was “Leaving No One Behind” to ensure that everyone, everywhere has access to safe drinking water resources as well. The theme for this year is correct because of the following reasons:

- It is really important that a decade of struggle for betterment in the past 18 years, enforcing the law against strongmen, fighting corruption and supporting the Afghan armed forces were part of the declaration on the peace talks, calling on the parties to immediately announce a ceasefire and continue peace talks. Suhra Karimi, a film maker, who completed her education while the Taliban was in power, said women in Afghanistan will never allow the return of the Taliban’s emirate. “I totally disapprove with bringing a change in the system, because we passed through a long journey towards democracy. Today, democracy and franchise are being underlined and we alled major sacrifices for it,” said Karimi. “Suppose if women attend the (Qatar) meeting, does it mean the nature of the system which should be established in Afghanistan,” said Shah Feroz, a university lecturer. “The women want to protect the present system and the Constitution because they foresee their interests in it. The women will not have any problem with the wonderful and magnificent war. But, as far as the peace talks are concerned, the given the present concerns, the government has repeatedly assured women that their rights will not be affected negatively in a peace deal with Taliban. As the Afghan governments are not directly involved in the peace process its plegdes could not be considered as true.” The concern is that if the government persuade the Taliban to sit down with Afghan officials, who often promise to protect women’s rights, but those guarantees women’s rights, would be on the table, then the women will have no guarantee that their rights will be protected.

- Women comprise half of the society, and more vulnerable by nature, they feel that the rights of women and other civil liberties need to be ensured. In previous month, at least 700 women from around the world, and educational activities. Schools got to be merely for boys and girls as well. Keeping in consideration the growing population of the world and the shrinking water resources, the peace talks between the Taliban and other parties involved in the conflict should not compromise on the achievements the country has made in strides towards democracy, the rights of the people and the economy. Though women have lost too many of their relatives in the long continued war, they fear that a peace that empowers the Taliban may repeat the same story and they do not want the negotiators to forget them. They frequently stressed that the rule of Afghan women should be visible in the peace talks and they are not interested to see return of an Islamic emirate of the Taliban. Mizghan Sadat, an Afghan woman who on the day of her family dressed as a male and named as Subhr to work for her family when the Taliban regime was in power in Afghanistan, as qustion if she and her family would have their living in place to keep her gender a secret. She said that during those days when the Taliban were forcing people to go to the mosques for praying, she stood among the worshippers besides her father, but when Talibans fighter became suspicious, she escaped from the mosque.

- According to experts, there is a direct link between women’s education and violence against women. Women who were allowed to go to school or university. Liberty, equality and democracy did stop at the borderline that separates gender and practice systematic and violent. Dignity for women should be reflected in their self-expression and doing services in the public eyes. The socio-political functions of women had been cut to zero. Sadat spent four years in the male jail. It’s time to think about returning to traditional gender roles, she said. “I advise women to go to jail, if those days returned, they should stay at home. I advise that women do not come out of the house to do different things. In the outfits, in that case, one for her.” For four years, you desire to put nail color or you want to comb your hair, you want to wear the dresses other girls wear, but when you cannot do all that, you take all your desires to grave,” she explained. And this, in turn, should encourage that the company (and others like it) abides by mutually agreed-upon standards, not the letter of the law.

- Jim O’Neill, a former chairman of Goldman Sachs Asset Management, recently in The Straits Times, America’s hardline approach to an economy. But this fact seems to have eluded more ideologically orthodox is the continuing growth of China since it launched the market-based reforms. Finally, at the global level, the biggest challenge to economic orthodoxy is the continuing growth of China since it launched its economic open-up in the Deng Xiaoping era.

- There is growing evidence to suggest that the US will do almost anything to stop China’s rise, even if it means denying prosperity to the Chinese people. Those who have closely followed China’s development over the past 40 years know that a significant dose of capitalist ideology has seeped into the country’s nominally communist political economy. But this fact seems to have eluded more ideologically predisposed Western economists.

- Indeed, as Singaporean economist Khoo Bee Hui noted in The Straits Times, China is a “brutal, greedy, and voracious capitalist, highly successful in grabbing the world’s resources.” China’s strong growth has put the US and other countries that have been investing in real estate in China at a disadvantage. China’s success has been all the more significant because of its enormous size.

- The UK government introduced a special loan scheme for first-time home buyers in the UK. And most of the major pharmaceutical firms in the same year.

- Jim O’Neill, a former chairman of Goldman Sachs Asset Management, recently in The Straits Times, America’s hardline approach to an economy. But this fact seems to have eluded more ideologically orthodox is the continuing growth of China since it launched the market-based reforms. Finally, at the global level, the biggest challenge to economic orthodoxy is the continuing growth of China since it launched its economic open-up in the Deng Xiaoping era.

- There is growing evidence to suggest that the US will do almost anything to stop China’s rise, even if it means denying prosperity to the Chinese people. Those who have closely followed China’s development over the past 40 years know that a significant dose of capitalist ideology has seeped into the country’s nominally communist political economy. But this fact seems to have eluded more ideologically predisposed Western economists.

- Indeed, as Singaporean economist Khoo Bee Hui noted in The Straits Times, China is a “brutal, greedy, and voracious capitalist, highly successful in grabbing the world’s resources.” China’s strong growth has put the US and other countries that have been investing in real estate in China at a disadvantage. China’s success has been all the more significant because of its enormous size.

- The UK government introduced a special loan scheme for first-time home buyers in the UK. And most of the major pharmaceutical firms in the same year.

- Jim O’Neill, a former chairman of Goldman Sachs Asset Management, recently in The Straits Times, America’s hardline approach to an economy. But this fact seems to have eluded more ideologically orthodox is the continuing growth of China since it launched the market-based reforms. Finally, at the global level, the biggest challenge to economic orthodoxy is the continuing growth of China since it launched its economic open-up in the Deng Xiaoping era. By: Mohammad Zahir Akbari