US Remains in Afghanistan “to Prevent Repeat of a 9/11”

KABUL - As the new US combat advisers arrived in Afghanistan, a US general says American forces should stay in Afghanistan to prevent attacks on the United States. Commander of the United States Marine Corps General Robert B. Neller said the US forces will remain in Afghanistan to prevent attacks from Afghanistan on the US, such as the September 11 attacks.

Speaking at the Atlantic Council, Neller said the US forces do not have a big role in Afghanistan’s war, but they remain in the country to provide advice and training to the Afghan forces.

Karim, said there were other players in the region, who would play their roles in bringing Taliban to negotiations table. "There is got to be reconciliation," he said.

The US general said Afghanistan cannot remain in war for eternity. He insisted that other players in the region must play their roles in bringing Taliban to the negotiating table.

The statement was made by the US Defence Secretary on the sidelines of a conference on Afghanistan.”

New Study Estimates Population to be 34.4 Million

KABUL - A report shows estimates are higher than previously thought and at least 50 percent of the population is eligible to vote. A survey conducted last year by a favorable organization estimates the population of Afghanistan to be over 34.4 million. However, information in the draft document, which ToloNews was able to obtain, has not yet been made public.

According to the findings of the organization, at least half of Afghanistan’s population is eligible to vote. The document states that the high-resolution population mapping efforts follow methods successfully implemented in other settings and involve the integration of the Socio-Demographic and Economic Survey (SDES) data, small area survey data, and high-resolution geospatial datasets.
