Gulalai Safi Replaces Niamat as Senator

KARUL - Former parliamentarian Gulalai Niazai has been named by presidential decree as Senator. The decision comes after her replacement was approved by the upper house of the National Assembly.

The announcement was made by a statement from the president’s office, which stated that Niazai had been selected to fill the vacant seat.

The statement went on to say that the new senator had been recommended by political parties and representatives from the province’s political landscape.

Niazai has been a long-time advocate for women’s rights and has been involved in various social and political initiatives in the province.

The appointment is expected to continue the momentum of progress and development in the province, according to the president’s statement.

The new senator is expected to bring a wealth of experience and knowledge to the position, having served in various capacities in both the government and civil society.

Her appointment is seen as a positive step towards strengthening the democratic institutions and ensuring the voices of marginalized communities are heard.

KABUL - Former parliamentarian Gulalai Niazai has been named as Senator for North Waziristan district.

The decision was announced by a presidential decree, which stated that Niazai had been selected to fill the vacant seat. The move is expected to have a positive impact on the province’s political landscape.

Niazai has been a long-time advocate for women’s rights and has been involved in various social and political initiatives in the province. Her appointment is seen as a positive step towards strengthening the democratic institutions and ensuring the voices of marginalized communities are heard.

The announcement was made by a statement from the president’s office, which stated that Niazai had been recommended by political parties and representatives from the province’s political landscape.

Niazai’s appointment is expected to continue the momentum of progress and development in the province, according to the president’s statement.

Her appointment is seen as a positive step towards strengthening the democratic institutions and ensuring the voices of marginalized communities are heard.

The new senator is expected to bring a wealth of experience and knowledge to the position, having served in various capacities in both the government and civil society.

KABUL - Former parliamentarian Gulalai Niazai has been named as Senator for North Waziristan district.

The decision was announced by a presidential decree, which stated that Niazai had been selected to fill the vacant seat. The move is expected to have a positive impact on the province’s political landscape.

Niazai has been a long-time advocate for women’s rights and has been involved in various social and political initiatives in the province. Her appointment is seen as a positive step towards strengthening the democratic institutions and ensuring the voices of marginalized communities are heard.

The announcement was made by a statement from the president’s office, which stated that Niazai had been recommended by political parties and representatives from the province’s political landscape.

Niazai’s appointment is expected to continue the momentum of progress and development in the province, according to the president’s statement.

Her appointment is seen as a positive step towards strengthening the democratic institutions and ensuring the voices of marginalized communities are heard.

The new senator is expected to bring a wealth of experience and knowledge to the position, having served in various capacities in both the government and civil society.