Afghan Women and Need for Widespread Discourse

By Horriah Bayani

W hen the last two decades, Afghan women have been a victim of instability and war. Women were restricted within the four walls without the right to get education two decades ago. In this period, women were not active in educational centers and active role in social arenas in recent years was filled by men. However, Afghan women underwent many changes in educational centers and their engagement in social and economic activities, with new education and strengthened public opinion for the betterment of women’s situation. The presence of women in both international and a ripe political environment was very useful to help create a belief to support political parties and promote to the position of minister.

The hope for future promised mere goals to study, get job and stand for their rights. Accelerating demands for real change in society will lead to frustration among women. That women will quickly learn the concept of independence, income individualism and so on and demand their own community and their social and mental changes in the environment.

Many laws have been approved for the progress of woman’s status, but there were slight acceptance and tolerance to implement them. It should be noted that development will take place as a result of changes in social and legal arenas. There is no exception for changes in women’s state and cultural environment. Change will take place as a result of superfluous change at the level of women’s education or income.

This fact will be risky for us and the society will witness a female generation with great demands. Women have the right to self-defense, but no one will realize them. These goals get rejected from the society.

Hence, women’s demands, on the one hand, and society’s movement at a small pace, on the other hand, is not the real motive to its well-being and running away from home. This gap is rapidly speed between girls’ education and the level of society’s realization and gradual cultural development. There is no chance to represent the role and influence in public education, policies and laws. Otherwise, we will see high rates of marital divorce, sexual abuse and violence. This gap is currently seen since women do not support the demands of female civil and women’s rights activists. To overcome this gap, we have to pay attention to two significant factors: firstly, generating public demands in one side, and secondly, the government and national representatives in line with the “Review of women’s status” includes the leadership and influence in macro policy is important.

To sum up, the political power originated from ethnic power through the decline of power, ethnic and political tension will surge up. The Taliban’s tendency towards assimilation was easily noticeable in the process of reviewing women’s status. The Taliban’s beliefs were rife during different regimes, mainly the Taliban’s regime.
