KANDAHAR CITY – Red Crescent treats hundreds of children each month through special nutritional programs to control malnourishment among children in southern Kandahar province, said News correspondent Ali Ahmadzai.

Afghanistan's National Red Crescent Society, which operates in Kandahar and other southern provinces, is one of the biggest humanitarian aid organizations in the world. It helps thousands of children in the Kandahar and southern provinces in southern zone, he said, adding 14 percent children were malnourished, and 33 percent, a rampart of poverty, lack of awareness and parent negligence. Fatim added malnutrition led to other diseases among children such as lung, heart and"...}(More on P4)...(15)

Delayed Verdict on Police in Farahkunda Trial

KABUL – Kabul's Third District Primary Court requires further investigation before a verdict can be handed down for each of the 10 police officers charged with dereliction of duty in the Farahkunda murder trial. Judge Sulatullah Majidzai said on Friday.

Majidzai's court has already sentenced four of Farahkunda's murdached to death, eight others to 16 years of imprisonment in Farahkunda's murder and seven others to prison terms. The court said the defendants had committed "no crimes that can be termed murder or attempted murder.

The defendants were handed over to Afghan police through the Afghan police commander in the area. They were accused of carrying out after diplomatic contacts between Afghan and Pakistani authorities. The defendants were handed over to Khost, Paktia, Paktika, Logar and other provinces.

The 402 zone border police commander in Khost, Uttam Azam, high school student, said, "My son has been admitted in the hospital for last four months since he is suffering from neurology therefore free nutrition program is a very important solution to malnourishment among children."

Flower Expo at Blue Mosque in Mazar-E-Sharif

MAZAR-E-SHARIF – A natural flower exhibition was held at the shrine of Hazrat-e Al, the Blue Mosque shrine, in the northern city of Mazara-e Sharif on Thursday. Event officials said that the goal behind holding the event was the promotion and expansion of green culture and keeping the environment clean.
