Russia Urges Joint Action with US Against Syria’s Al-Qaida

MOSCOW - The Russian defense minister proposed on Wednesday that the US-led coalition launch joint action against Al-Qaeda-linked militants in Syria, as known as the Nusra Front. Defense Minister Sergei Shoigu said that Moscow had proposed to Washington that the coalition carry out all its actions under a cease-fire in Syria, which is where the Al-Qaeda branch is active.

Shoigu suggested that starting from today, Russia and the US-led coalition conduct joint strikes against the Nus-ra in any other areas.

German Companies Threaten to Scale Back Investment if Leave EU

BRUSSELS - German companies have warned they would scale back investment in Britain if it leaves the EU and warned that the decision to leave the union is the country’s “worst decision ever”. The country’s foreign minister, who is heading a high-level delegation to Brussels, said the two sides should work together to keep investment in Britain and said the United Kingdom was being marked down in a bilateral investment treaty between the UK and the EU.

The United Kingdom is scheduled to hold a referendum on June 23 on the country’s membership of the EU and it is feared that a “Brexit” could have negative impacts on the country’s economy.

In a survey released by the Association of German Chambers of Commerce (DZ Bank), 87 percent of German companies running in the UK said they would scale back investment in the country.

The two sides have been caught up in a “Brexit” row, which has sent the pound to a record low against the dollar and turned the country’s economy into a walking dead.

The German government is preparing to reduce its contribution to the country’s deficit in Britain if it leaves the union. The country’s economic minister, who is heading a delegation to Brussels, said the two sides should work together to keep investment in Britain and said the United Kingdom was being marked down in a bilateral investment treaty between the UK and the EU.

The United Kingdom has been on red alert for a possible "Brexit" since last year, and Britons have been told that it would be better off without Britain.

Forecasts suggest that more than 3 million Britons - and thus the country’s economy - would be affected if the country leaves the union. The country’s economic minister, who is heading a delegation to Brussels, said the two sides should work together to keep investment in Britain and said the United Kingdom was being marked down in a bilateral investment treaty between the UK and the EU.

The United Kingdom has been on red alert for a possible "Brexit" since last year, and Britons have been told that it would be better off without Britain.

Forecasts suggest that more than 3 million Britons - and thus the country’s economy - would be affected if the country leaves the union. The country’s economic minister, who is heading a delegation to Brussels, said the two sides should work together to keep investment in Britain and said the United Kingdom was being marked down in a bilateral investment treaty between the UK and the EU.

The United Kingdom has been on red alert for a possible "Brexit" since last year, and Britons have been told that it would be better off without Britain.

Forecasts suggest that more than 3 million Britons - and thus the country’s economy - would be affected if the country leaves the union. The country’s economic minister, who is heading a delegation to Brussels, said the two sides should work together to keep investment in Britain and said the United Kingdom was being marked down in a bilateral investment treaty between the UK and the EU.

The United Kingdom has been on red alert for a possible "Brexit" since last year, and Britons have been told that it would be better off without Britain.