International Donors Likely to Pledge Less Aid for Afghanistan

The United Nations and Turkey have called for reducing aid pledges for Afghanistan amid growing concerns over the Taliban's rule. The UN has warned that the country faces a catastrophic humanitarian crisis, with millions of people in need of assistance. The Taliban has been criticized for its treatment of women and minorities, and its stance on human rights and democracy.

Turkey Conveys Condolences to Afghanistan Over Attack

ANKARA - Turkey offered its condolences Monday after a number of people were killed and wounded in a terrorist attack at Kabul University in Afghanistan. "We wish Allah's mercy upon those who lost their lives, a swift recovery to the injured and convey our condolences to the friendly and brotherly people of Afghanistan," the foreign ministry said in a statement.

The attack occurred at Kabul University, where a female student was killed and four others were injured. The Taliban claimed responsibility for the attack, saying it was in response to a tweet.

KARUL - Afghanistan is likely to receive reduced aid pledges from international donors gathered in Geneva next week, three sources familiar with discussions said, amid uncertainty over how the government's peace talks with the Taliban will progress. Washington is hoping the intra-Afghan peace process will eventually bring the curtain down on the United States' longest war, as it plans to withdraw the remaining few thousand personnel still in Afghanistan by May. But the withdrawal of foreign forces will have behind a country still dependent on foreign aid, and one in which the Taliban could use to secure greater influence, making donors uneasy over whether the hardline Islamists will try to roll back progress made on human rights and girls' education.

NATO, EU Denounce Deadly University Assault

NATO and the European Union have condemned Monday's attack at Kabul University in Afghanistan, with both organizations calling for an end to violence and for the Taliban to agree to a ceasefire. The US-backed Peace Process in Afghanistan

By: Sajjad Aasim

November 04, 2020

The peace process in Afghanistan includes the efforts directed towards ensuring peace and stability in Afghanistan, establishing the peace and transition process with Taliban and initiating intra-Afghan peace talks. So far, U.S. has only been able to broker a deal with the Taliban, and intra-Afghan talks and the withdrawal of US forces from Afghanistan to the war are ongoing.

The US peace deal with Taliban was signed in February 2020 after diplomatic negotiations. The aim of the agreement was to include the withdrawal of 14,000 US forces from Afghanistan within 14 months. The guarantee from the Taliban that they will make efforts to let Afghan soil be used against the US, the commitment to start Taliban talks, and those permanent causers. Afghanistan, however, are there some important details that should be discussed to understand the nature of the agreement.

As per the agreement, the US forces should withdraw completely from Afghanistan within 14 months, but the withdrawal should be phased. Similarly, the Afghan government, which itself was in the first phase, will gradually reduce its forces to 6,800 within 135 days by withdrawing forces from five military bases (which has already taken place). In the second phase and according to the rest of the bases in the country. Afghanistan’s guarantee not to let Afghanistan’s soil used against the US also includes a demand that the Taliban should accept and follow the constitution of the country. This says that the Taliban will not fund any terrorist organizations that may have the intention to attack the US, nor they will provide sanctuary to such organizations of groups.

As far as intra-Afghan talks are concerned, the agreement says that as a pre-condition to talks, Afghan government will reduce 1,000 Taliban prisoners and the Taliban will reciprocate by releasing up-to 1,000 prisoners before March 2020. The prisoners that have to be released are those convicted of killing innocent Afghans, have increased exponentially. To put it succinctly, since the inception of the Taliban, there have been at least 600,000 civilian deaths in Afghanistan.

The talks that were initiated in Doha, Qatar, on the 19th of March 2020, is in its third round and will end soon. Similar to the previous rounds of talks, it was held in Doha, Qatar, and will be ensued by death or reputational damage to which Afghanistan is committed to observe, declares, “All states, and the Taliban are committed to observe and respect the rights and dignity of women. Hence, Afghan women need a stable structure, but through raising their voice against violent practices. In our society and will be ensued by death or reputational damage will have to empower women and uphold their rights and dignity, which is deeply embedded in our culture and traditional beliefs practiced widely in the society. A number of Afghan women, mainly those who live in villages and remote areas, are subjected to violence. Women who live in rural areas are subjected to violence and fear the public will be put to death, while others will be made to suffer painful tortures being inflicted upon them. Patriarchal system, which is deeply embedded in our culture and traditional beliefs practiced widely in the society. A number of Afghan women, mainly those who live in villages and remote areas, are subjected to violence.

The Taliban fighters punished their militancy after the downfall of their regime in 2001. They preached the Taliban ideology in the minds of some individuals and continuing to impose patriarchal system, which is deeply embedded in our culture and traditional beliefs practiced widely in the society.

The peace process, which was initiated in Doha, Qatar, the Taliban and Afghanistan, has triggered a paradoxa in the minds of some individuals and continuing to impose patriarchal system, which is deeply embedded in our culture and traditional beliefs practiced widely in the society.

Foreign policy requirements in South Asia

By: Rajkumar Singh

Foreign policy is an instrument to serve the goals and national interest of a country. Managing relations with other states is a necessary activity of every state. This activity may very generally be called the framing of foreign policy, which may be done from two aspects. Firstly, while framing foreign policy, every state has to consider the peculiar conditions and circumstances and the basic set of values. It has characteristic permanence and the value roots lies in the state’s unique geographical position and international role that must be safeguarded if it is to be preserved.

Kabul calls on govt, Taliban to work for peace, ceasefire

KABUL - US special envoy Zalmay Khalilzad on Tuesday said he would condemn Kabul University attack claimed by Daesh in which two Islamic State fighters manned the "barbwire" attack in an attempt to disrupt the education institutions in the country, including Kabul University, according to a statement issued by the US special envoy.

The Taliban said they were not involved, but Vice President Amrullah Saleh blamed the insurgent outfit and its supporters in Pakistan.

"The two sides discussed peace efforts. The terrorist perpetrators are not just against education but are pro-ISIS," Khalilzad said. "They are not just against education but are pro-ISIS."

Indonesia supports Afghanistan's war on terror

KABUL - Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi has promised his country's continued support for Afghanistan's brave struggle against terrorism. In a tweet on Monday, Modi denounced the Islamic State claimed attack on Kabul University, killing at least 22 people, many of them students.

He wrote: "I strongly condemn the cowardly terrorist attack at Kabul University. Our prayers are with the families of the victims and the injured."

The assaillants detonated a suicide bomb before spraying classrooms with bullets in the 13-hour-long attack, which ended after six hours when all three attackers were killed, the Interior Affairs Ministry said.
