A fire broke out at the Afghan police’s coordination center in Kabul on Monday morning, an official told Pajhwok.

According to the news agency, Gen. Qadir, the governor of Kabul province, said the fire erupted due to an electrical short circuit in the area at around 11am. Losses resulting from the fire were not revealed.

KABUL - Parwan firefighters were also called in to areas where the fire was burning and at least seven militants were killed in the latest airstrikes in eastern Nangarhar province.

The provincial police commandment in a statement said the fighter planes targeted the ISIS hideouts in the vicinity of the latest airstrikes in eastern Nangarhar province. The group’s offshoot, ISIS Khorasan, were killed in the operation.
