Afghans Arriving in Germany May Find the Welcome Is Wearing Thin

BERLIN - A growing sense that Afghanistan is slipping into greater chaos and danger may also make it more likely that Afghans in Europe, hopeful that they will enjoy the same welcome given to Syrians and Iraqis seeking safety from war and terror. Aided by Sweden and Germany, and feared by others, they would see change along the migrant trail that leads through the EU.

About 64,000 Afghans were registered as refugees or asylum seekers in Germany, according to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.
