Don’t Withdraw from Afghanistan or Iran: France to US

PARI - France will make clear to US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo during a visit in Paris next week that it opposes a unilateral American withdrawal from Afghanistan and Iran given the fragile situation in the two countries, its foreign minister said on Friday, as quoted in a report by Reuters.

Reasons reported that French Foreign Minister Jean-Yves Le Drian and French President Emmanuel Macron are due to meet Pompeo on Monday in Paris. Meanwhile, NATO Secretary General who addressed an event on NATO 2030 initiative, said “In the recent weeks, we have seen serious attacks in France, in Austria as well as in Afghan- stan,” NATO must be able to re- spond to all these challenges. This comes as US news agen- cies reported on Thursday that the new changes in the Pentagon by rising team that the US will ac- cept the withdrawal of troops from Afghanistan. During his presidential cam- paign, Trump vowed to with- draw the troops from Afghan- stan by Christmas. CNN reported on Thursday that retired army Gen. Douglas MacGregor, who was an ardent opponent of the US military’s presence in Afghanistan has been made a senior adviser at the Pen- tagon.

Politics reported that current and former administration of- ficials say Trump fired Defense Secretary Mark Esper Monday in part over his opposition to accelerating troop drawdowns overseas, especially in Af-ghanistan. Politics also reported that any move to accelerate withdrawals would set up a clash with the nation’s top generals and other US allies who have argued against leaving US forces (More on P4-L(7))

Afghan Forces Retake Military Base in Kunduz; 14 Killed

KUNDUZ – At least 12 security force members were killed in an attack by the Taliban in the northern province of Kunduz on Thursday night. The sources added that 11 security force members were wounded in the attack. Meanwhile, two police force members were killed when they came on the way to the army base to help the forces when their vehicle hit a roadside bomb in which two others were wounded, the sources said.

The military base, which is a key location in the northern province, fell to the Taliban for some hours but was retaken by the security force- ers, the sources said. The sources said that at least 10 Taliban forces members were killed or wounded, but the attack has not commented on the incident. This comes as a military base was targeted by a bomb attack in too quickly while the security situation remains volatile,” “A precipitous and what appears to be the near total withdrawal of US forces (More on P4-L(9))

NANGARHAR: Ministry of Agriculture, Irrigation and Livestock (MAIL) said Thursday this year’s production volumes of persimmons has increased in various parts of Nangarhar province. According to the ministry, so far this year, the Nangarhar province’s harvest has yielded 2,200 tons - making for happy farmers.

The ministry said that at the moment, 2,000 tons of persimmons are grown in Kamuz, Kuzkatun, Bektai, and Beshad districts. MAIL has over the past few years focused on encourag- ing new projects and established orchards in Kamuz, Kuzkatun, Bektai, and Beshad among oth- er districts. In total, there are 24 types of persimmons on Nangarhar ag- ricultural department’s research farms. Persimmon is a popular fruit in Afghanistan and is grown in the eastern provinces including Ko- labar and Laghman. Nangarhars climate meanwhile is perfect for growing persimmon, as well as dates, MAIL said. The rocky road of peace talks

By: Mohammad Zahir Akbari

Security is one of the most complicated concepts in political literature. Which has been defined in different ways by different thinkers and scholars. Traditionally, it has been seen as the condition in which a society is defined such that it is not be in danger or not be in under threat but in contemporary political literature, the concept of security is also defined according to society's economic, social, cultural, and political welfare. As far as security is concerned, one may be believe that it originates from within man and has a close relationship with individual health. Wherever a person can enjoy and establish the security he needs to do something.

In order to deeply understand the concept of security, we need to dispose it into smaller and more comprehensible components. For example, we need to know what is personal security, type of security, dimension of security, security threat, producer of security, goal of security, whose security is who, and so on. Let's begin from the definition of security; the first type of security is personal security. This type of security includes the right of life, survival, and liberty. In the face of security, one or more rights, basic necessity, the right to the preservation and the projection of one's dignity. The individual security is very close to public security. The distinction between individual and public security can be found in the threat factor. Individual security is often violated by governments, while public security is more often violated by citizens.

The second type of security is public security. The subject of public security includes human life, property, honor and dignity of citizens as citizens. Whatever crime or any kind of violation, as far as it is value, public security is compromised whether it was committed by other citizens or by government. That has happened by government opposition on government agents or personal such as assassinations, kidnapping, target killing is considered outside the scope of public security and is defined in the framework of remote security as the act of violence that is not imposed because of their citizenship reason. The second type of security is social security which refers to the thoughts and actions that members of a family take to maintain their peace of mind and physical health against invaders, including the dangers posed by other humans or animals. The social security is social security which pertains to social groups.

The social groups have two basic elements including group population and group organization. It is possible that any two of these elements will endanger social security. Gangland, formalized, criminal organization, policies that result in reduction or deprivation of a group's population are threats that threaten the population of security. These policies are the policies that damage the culture, customs, and values of the group that shape the group's identity and, consequently, their social structure. The population is the subject and mostly considered as national security or internal security.

Overall, the talks are a highly bumpy road and the Taliban's statement shows that the group is not willing to talk with the Afghan government and its allies. The negotiations are being turned into a diplomatic war, and the Taliban's statement shows that their war is not over. The peace process and its aim need to be clarified. Meanwhile, regional and international stakeholders should leverage on their leverage in order to help their forces deal with the US. Afghanistan is facing a new security challenge due to the Taliban's integration with the international terrorist groups and declaration of ceasefire.

Attacks spur EU to weigh tough border, anti-extremism steps

When Europe’s Union interior ministers on Friday weighed increased border and counter extremist efforts following a series of killings in France and Italy in recent weeks by low-level attackers with links to Islamic group, the ministers met via video conference on the fifth anniversary of one of the bloodiest attacks on French soil, the Islamic State terror group’s suicide bomb attack on a stadium in Paris that killed 130 people at a music hall and killed four in Nov. 13, 2015.

Austria and France want their partners to approve EU’s border control, better tackle terrorism, and propaganda online, and monitor or detain jihadis who’ve returned to EU countries or are trying to enter or leave the bloc.

According to the European Commission’s website, the EU’s interior ministers met and discussed measures to strengthen the external border and to deal with the如此ness of terrorism and radicalization inspired by violent extremism.

Dae’e’s Murder an Attempt to Curtail Free Speech: Ghani

KARUL - President Mohammad Ashraf Ghani has said terrorists could not smother the freedom of expression by killing journalists, according to a statement issued on Thursday.

The statement from Presidential Palace quoted the president as saying that terrorists killed a journalist at this morning and injured some civilians in an attempt to shut the voice of free media in order to.hamper their crimes.

Ghani said the freedom of speech was a milestone achievement that came after huge sacrifices. Mohammad Elias Daee, a local reporter of Arzai Radio, was killed in eastern Laghman province on Friday morning.

A statement condemned the killing of Daee in strongest words and termed the attack a crime against humanity. The statement asked domestic and international institutions to put pressure on circles behind the murder and force them to stop the killing of journalists. Free Media Support Organisation (NMI) in a statement said the killing of Daee happened at a time when journalist were deeply concerned about their safety.

According to NMI, the government has failed to ensure the safety of journalists and relied on verbal assurances. (Pajhwok)
