I n recent days, the issue of terrorism makes international headlines. Terrorist networks have triggered a sense of public disappointment through their cruel practices and carry out attacks with direct and indirect terrorism in every nook and cranny. Despite the defeat of the well-equipped Iraqi State (IS) group, terrorists still seek to extend their reach across the globe.

The destructive and bloody suicide bombings carried out around the world are about the ultimate objectives of the group. Terrorists never tend to stop violence and bloodshed. The Friday’s bomb-and-gun attack on a mosque in Egypt, which left 30 dead and 120 wounded behind, filled one with strong fear and hatred and, once again, reveals the ugly face of terrorists — who are responsible for the loss of life.

The attackers were said to carry a flag representing the IS group. There are many fundamental groups which continue shedding the blood of men, women, and children all over the world. It is really shocking to see that those who operate under the sacred term of religion, kill worshippers in sacred place. Such attacks are in reality terrorist attacks which are in reality part of their ideology and propaganda.

To reduce militancy and safeguard the rights and freedoms of all human beings, the human societies will have to launch a campaign against terrorism. To reduce militancy and safeguard the rights and freedoms of all human beings, the human societies will have to launch a campaign against terrorism.

The world demands the strictest penalties for people responsible for the loss of life, terrorist networks have triggered global worries and become the greatest threat to humankind.

There have been several reports in the media where the IS group operates. For example, the IS loyalists carried out many deadly attacks on mosques in Afghanistan and sought to torment societies.

The fundamental ideologies of terrorists know no religious or moral boundaries. They have simply adopted religion as their shield to justify their inhuman acts and trap people to join them. Take, for example, the IS group. After the defeat of IS, Iraqi officials have found the sites of more than 70 mass graves, numbers that have overwhelmed the nation’s police and forensics resources as well as the Iraqis’ international partners helping to search for tens of thousands of missing people.

A 25-year-old shepherd, Omar reveals his memory about IS practices in the Eastern Region of Iraq, in the area where Tel-Afek_-_Lub_Lub protests had happened during the second and third years of the massive strike. He said that in the past, after IS had been defeated, the government moved the Telebeks from their homes to other areas, and still no one has been able to locate them.

The world demands the strictest penalties for people responsible for the loss of life, terrorist networks have triggered global worries and become the greatest threat to human beings. Since violence and cruelty run rampant in human societies, they have frequently violated humanitarian law and killed civilians in many regions of the world.

Needless to say, terrorist networks have triggered global worries and become the greatest threat to human beings. Since violence and cruelty run rampant in human societies, they have frequently violated humanitarian law and killed civilians in many regions of the world. India’s Prime Minister Narendra Modi visited the temple on the day, which is dedicated to the memory of those who lost their lives on 26/11.

Most of the victims were tourists who were attacked by terrorists at the Gateway of India and other places during the India-Pakistan Jadeema match, and were killed by the militants.
