A global coalition of NGOs working to advance education of children in conflict zones says recent gains in expanding access to education that have allowed millions of Afghan boys and girls to enroll in school are at risk due to growing attacks on students, teachers, and schools.}

Humanitarian Groups Warn of Growing Attacks on Schools in Afghanistan

KABUL - The numbers of children, particularly girls, who are out of school in Afghanistan are once again rising, according to a report by the Global Coalition to Protect Education from Attack. The report, entitled Attacks on Education in Afghanistan was released Tuesday to coincide with the Geneva Ministerial Conference on Education in Afghanistan, taking place on Nov. 27 and 28. Tawab Ghorzang, a spokesman for Atmar’s office, has told several news agencies that Amrullah Sailzad’s efforts to get the Taliban to agree to peace talks. In “very strong negotiations” over the past year, Trump has acknowledged that his original instinct was to withdraw from Afghanistan, but last week he suggested he is willing to stick it out, asserting that the U.S. is “in very strong negotiations” – an apparent reference to the U.S.-Taliban peace talks. The human cost of the conflict rarely makes headlines, but last week he suggested he is willing to stick it out, asserting that the U.S. is “in very strong negotiations” – an apparent reference to the U.S.-Taliban peace talks. The human cost of the conflict rarely makes headlines, but last week he suggested he is willing to stick it out, asserting that the U.S. is “in very strong negotiations” – an apparent reference to the U.S.-Taliban peace talks.

Rise in US Deaths in Afghanistan Clouds Outlook for Peace

WASHINGTON — A rash of American combat deaths in Afghanistan is putting a spotlight on a stalemated 17-year war that is testing President Donald Trump’s commitment to pursuing peace talks with the Taliban. Trump has acknowledged that his original instinct was to withdraw from Afghanistan, but last week he suggested he is willing to stick it out, asserting that the U.S. is “in very strong negotiations” – an apparent reference to the U.S.-Taliban peace talks.

Atmar Announces His Candidacy for Presidential Election

KABUL - Mohammad Hanif Atmar, former Afghan national security advisor, has announced that he would be contesting as a candidate in the presidential election in April 2019. A global coalition of NGOs working to advance education of children in conflict zones says recent gains in expanding access to education that have allowed millions of Afghan boys and girls to enroll in school are at risk due to growing attacks on students, teachers, and schools.

Asia-Pacific Countries Recommit to Building More Inclusive, Equitable Societies

Bangkok - Senior officials representing governments from across Asia and the Pacific today recomitted their countries to putting people and their rights at the heart of development, noting that gender equality, sexual and reproductive health and rights, as well as the concerns and needs of older persons, youth and migrants were indispensable to more inclusive, equitable and sustainable societies.

Outlook Afghanistan

Email: outlookafghanistan@gmail.com
Phone: 0093 (799) 005019/777-005019
Add: In front of Habibia High School, District 3, Kabul, Afghanistan

Weather Forecast

- crowded, chronic teacher shortages, and insecurity, as some of the key factors preventing children from getting an education. The Afghan Ministry of Education and international agencies have identified social and cultural attitudes, child marriage, poverty, violence and bullying, lack of educational infrastructure, overcrowding, chronic teacher shortages, and insecurity, as some of the key factors preventing children from getting an education.

Unique Atlantic U.A. Telecom

We offer the highest speed internet services all over Afghanistan.

0796 701 701
0796 702 702
sales@uatemotel.com.af
www.uatemotel.com.af

Government of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan

Note: The government of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan is committed to fighting terrorism and promoting peace and development in the region. The government is also committed to ensuring the rights of all citizens, including women and girls, to access education. The government has taken steps to protect and promote the rights of children, women, and girls. The government is also committed to working with the international community to achieve these goals.

Humanitarian Groups Warn of Growing Attacks on Schools in Afghanistan

KABUL - The numbers of children, particularly girls, who are out of school in Afghanistan are once again rising, according to a report by the Global Coalition to Protect Education from Attack. The report, entitled Attacks on Education in Afghanistan was released Tuesday to coincide with the Geneva Ministerial Conference on Education in Afghanistan, taking place on Nov. 27 and 28. Tawab Ghorzang, a spokesman for Atmar’s office, has told several news agencies that Amrullah Sailzad’s efforts to get the Taliban to agree to peace talks. In “very strong negotiations” over the past year, Trump has acknowledged that his original instinct was to withdraw from Afghanistan, but last week he suggested he is willing to stick it out, asserting that the U.S. is “in very strong negotiations” – an apparent reference to the U.S.-Taliban peace talks.