The two-day summit in Geneva is billed as a platform for the Afghan government to engage and find solutions to return and discuss aid contributions to its bid to achieve stability and security.

The conference comes at a time when the Taliban, in its bid to hold direct talks with the Taliban, has signed a peace agreement with the United States, an agreement which was topped following a U.S-led invasion in 2001.

Tens of thousands of people have been killed, while at least 26,000 have dragged on for more than 20 years and cost billions of dollars.

In November, Taliban officials held three days of talks with U.S. special envoy for peace in Afghanistan Zalmay Khalilzad in Qatar, aimed at resuming the direct peace talks with the Afghan government.

The Afghan government has not been invited to these talks.

Last week, a five-member Taliban delegation headed to the Russian capital, Moscow, during an international conference to discuss Afghanistan.
