China, Afghanistan and Pakistan Tripartite Anti-Terrorism Cooperation Ushered a New Era

O n the afternoon of October 12, local time in Du- bai, Afghanistan, China and Pakistan have signed the "Khalilzad Peace Agreement" with Chinese Premier Li Keqiang. Abdullahis said: China has always been a friend of the Afghan people. Afghanistan is willing to actively deepen cooperation with China in the field of anti-terrorism, actively promote bilateral cooperation between China and Pakistan, and promote regional peace and stability. The two sides have reached an important consensus on the issue of anti- terrorism cooperation. The day after the meeting, dozens of people were killed or injured in an explosion on an elec- tion rally in the northern province of Talibani. There have been similar attacks in other National Assembly elections in the country. The Taliban issued a statement a few days ago, threatening to launch attacks against specific targets dur- ing the election period. The Afghan security forces have recently had to strengthen security measures throughout the country to ensure safety and stability.

The anti-terrorism cooperation between China, Afghan- stan and Pakistan has achieved great positive significance in the maintenance of the domestic stability of the relevant par- ties and the regional security situation. On the Chinese side, there are close contacts and exchanges between the "East Turkistan" terrorist forces in China and the Taliban, Al- Qaeda, and other terrorist organizations in Asia. Strengthening the anti-terrorism cooperation with Afghanistan and Pakistan has practical and important significance in the prevention and control of terrorism in China. At the side of the Afghan- stan and Pakistan, the terrorist operations in both countries are interrelated; the economic development is relatively slow affected by the security situation. China, as an import- ant neighbor of the two countries and a big country in the world, in the field of anti-terrorism, Afghanistan and Paki- stan also have mutual interests. At the same time, as the main region of terrorism in South Asia, the Pakistan also has a very positive significance for the mainte- nance of stability in South Asia and even the prevention and control of terrorism in other parts of the world.

How Air Corridors in Afghanistan Connect it to the Region

By: Sameer Rasa

Afghanistan is a country characterized by low level of modernization and development, there is sufficient historical evidence that the government in Kabul has been ineptive in terms of exercising power in Afghanistan. As a matter of bitter fact, politics and power in Afghanistan are strongly influenced by the country's ethnic characteristics. There- fore, the deep ethnic-linguistic divisions and the decentralized nature of the Afghan polity provide convenient fault lines ready for exploitation. After the fall of Taliban in 2001, a basic prob- lem has been the failure of the Afghan government institutions to provide good governance and socio-political development to many parts of the country that could act as a means to close the three gaps.

Correspondingly, there are different layers of geopolitical com- plications with far-reaching strategic implications in Afghan- stan. The presence of the erstwhile Soviet Union, and the United States, in today's context has only served to legitimize the activi- ties of the insurgents and the Taliban across the Afghan territory. And Russia’s and Iran’s contrasting positions have only exacerbated the complex situation of the Afghan crisis.

Some political scholars hold that Ghani’s earnest appeal to the parties involved thinking of ending the war in Afghanistan, in- stead of winning it, does not seem to bring results under present circumstances of Afghanistan.

Afghanistan is a landlocked country, we will not be able to root out poverty and instabil- ity by only developing the country's interior. Therefore, the country is mainly trying to construct the trade routes to the other parts of the world. The Tajikistan and Uzbekistan, especially the Taliban, and have achieved remarkable results.

At the trilateral level, China, Afghanistan and Pakistan have established a mechanism for dialogue and cooperation on anti-terrorist issues, and have reached an important consensus on the issue of anti-terrorist cooperation. The two sides have carried out many joint operations against terrorist organizations. The Taliban is also a player on the regional stage, and has achieved remarkable results.
