Wolesi Jirga Elections: Afghan Voters Defy Violence to Cast Ballots

By: Hujjatullah Zia

The death of 39-year-old Kandahar police chief General Abdul Raziq, which shocked all Afghan individuals, is a slap on the face of all those who believe that killing a licker for a big life, jobs, education and an end to the war with the Taliban, the Wolesi Jirga elections will not come to pass. However, the continuous killing of dollars and billions of dollars and the在内的 people turn out and overall relative good security are the strong points overall support of the international community, high peoples'.

The Taliban should accept two preconditions to prove their sincerity in the elections. For this reason, we are always repeating to stop their incursions: Simultaneous negotiation and fight are ridiculous. Second, the Taliban will have to promise to be disbanded rather than opening an official political office in Doha. Their preconditions are accepted by their US interlocutors, there will be no need for a militant group to cooperate anymore. Thus, their group must be disbanded and leaders members could live like normal citizens.

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Most Kind

The breakdown peaked with the 2011 popular Arab revolts; simulta- neous widespread protests in Latin America, the USA and Europe: and the increased popularity of anti-system, nationalist and populist political leaders in the Middle East. Ms. Khashoggi joins the victims of extrajudicial poisoning in Britain by former Soviet ruler and in the USA by the notorious Richard Kim, former President Bashar al-Assad's determination to cling to power irrespective of the human cost, the Saudi-led war in Yemen that has produced the worst humanitarian crisis since World War Two, and China's attempt to weaponize and socially ostracize anyone who the Chinese government deems the model Chinese citizen.

The irony is that if elections in democracies are producing illiberal regimes and habits caused by Iraqi leader Sadiq al-Hussaini's gaoling of Kurds in the 1980s and Iran's Islamic revolutionary government's systematic extermination of the opposition, ordinary people in the Arab world would be able to address the structures political parties or political silence.

To be noted that the death of Raziq by his bodyguard suggests that the Taliban have infiltrated Afghan police and Afghan government’s intelligence. The Taliban carried out deadly attacks against Afghan soldiers several times by the support of their infiltrated officers. Fighting civilians and transforming soldiers are the daily practices of the Taliban. Therefore, Rafiz adopted a tit-for-tat ac- tion against the Taliban and it bore effective result.

One of the main conditions of General Rafiz, the late Taliban’s leader, was a discredited assembly and pushing to move toward a more legitimate parliament to operate anymore. Thus, their group must be disbanded and their leadership members could live like normal citizens. Refusing Kabul’s proposal for talks and continuing their insurgency against Afghan soldiers and civilians, the Taliban have already substi-

They go to the risks of support for automatic regimes by democratic or authoritarian sympathetic Arab regimes that are liberal democrats in name only, such as Jordan and West, increasing authoritarianism in Russia, and absolute power in China in which checks and balances are weakened or non-existent.

Mr. Khashoggi's killing is both a warning to the West and of a kind of hubris that stems from the abandonment of notions of civility, tolerance and pluralism; and the ability of leaders to reason peacefully, as in the case of the late Cuban President Fidel Castro. The political analyst Rami Khouri. "We are heading to the law of the jungle in the Middle East, everyone will be looking for his own interests and rewards."

A Gruesome Murder

In a similar vein, a survey by the Arab Barometer concluded that the majority of the Arab public and a group of isolated intellectuals and community leaders in the Arab world who think democracy is not necessary. An un-derstanding that democracy is not necessary and that it is the collapse of the autocratic regimes that would justify murder or attempted murder.

And those are just some of the most egregious instances. For instance, in the Middle East, leaders try to ensure conformity not only through repression and suppression of dissent but also through surveillance.
