It’s in Denmark’s interest for us to continue working towards a peaceful solution,” the prime minister said. “We will not use extra funds for training and other costs associated with the police force beyond what has been set in the budget.”

The Afghan government and the Taliban are currently engaged in a dialogue in the Egyptian city of Sharm el-Sheikh. The Taliban have repeatedly called on the Afghan government to show a serious commitment to the peace process and make the necessary concessions.

The Afghan government has welcomed the talks, stating that they are a positive step towards peace. However, some critics argue that the Afghan government is not making enough efforts to overcome the obstacles that may arise during the negotiations.

The US has also expressed its support for the talks, stating that a peaceful solution is necessary to end the long war in Afghanistan.

3) First Ever Girls' Education

On the occasion of International Girls' Day, the foreign minister of Afghanistan decided to launch a program to educate Afghan girls. The program aims to enroll 500,000 girls in schools across the country.

According to the foreign minister, the program is necessary to ensure that girls have access to education, which is a fundamental human right. The minister also stated that the program is part of the government's strategy to improve social and economic conditions in Afghanistan.

4) Taliban Request for Release

The Taliban has requested the Afghan government to release Mullah Baradar, the leader of the Taliban, who has been in custody since 2010. Mullah Baradar is considered a key figure in the Taliban's internal politics.

The Taliban has been holding talks with the Afghan government for a peace deal, and Mullah Baradar's release could be a major breakthrough in the negotiations. However, the Afghan government has not yet responded to the Taliban's request.

5) NATO Session

The Afghan government has been holding talks with the NATO forces in Kabul. The talks aim to discuss the withdrawal of NATO forces from Afghanistan and the future of the security situation in the country.

The Afghan government has been calling for a transition to an Afghan-led and Afghan-owned security force. The NATO forces have been providing training and support to the Afghan security forces.

6) First Ever Girls' Education

On the occasion of International Girls' Day, the foreign minister of Afghanistan decided to launch a program to educate Afghan girls. The program aims to enroll 500,000 girls in schools across the country.

According to the foreign minister, the program is necessary to ensure that girls have access to education, which is a fundamental human right. The minister also stated that the program is part of the government's strategy to improve social and economic conditions in Afghanistan.

4) Taliban Request for Release

The Taliban has requested the Afghan government to release Mullah Baradar, the leader of the Taliban, who has been in custody since 2010. Mullah Baradar is considered a key figure in the Taliban's internal politics.

The Taliban has been holding talks with the Afghan government for a peace deal, and Mullah Baradar's release could be a major breakthrough in the negotiations. However, the Afghan government has not yet responded to the Taliban's request.

5) NATO Session

The Afghan government has been holding talks with the NATO forces in Kabul. The talks aim to discuss the withdrawal of NATO forces from Afghanistan and the future of the security situation in the country.

The Afghan government has been calling for a transition to an Afghan-led and Afghan-owned security force. The NATO forces have been providing training and support to the Afghan security forces.

6) First Ever Girls' Education

On the occasion of International Girls' Day, the foreign minister of Afghanistan decided to launch a program to educate Afghan girls. The program aims to enroll 500,000 girls in schools across the country.

According to the foreign minister, the program is necessary to ensure that girls have access to education, which is a fundamental human right. The minister also stated that the program is part of the government's strategy to improve social and economic conditions in Afghanistan.