Rouhani Warns of Spread of Terrorism

Iran’s President Hassan Rouhani has called for world countries to unite and account for the issue of violence and terrorism, warning that the phenomenon has now spread even into European waters.

"Today, the effects of violence and terrorism have also spilled over into Europe like a contagious disease. No, all should feel the danger in every region that violence and terrorism exist," Rouhani said in a meeting with Croatia’s Parliament Speaker Josip Luka in the Iranian capital, Tehran, on Sunday.

He added that Iran currently plays an effective role in the campaign against terrorism, saying that Iran is ready to cooperate with all countries, including the European Union, and now that the situation against terrorism is getting better.

The Iranian president also stated that the Islamic Republic of Croatia and Iran have strong economic relations, indicating that the two countries have some appropriate grounds for improving economic cooperation after the conclusion of the July 14 nuclear agreement between Iran and world powers. EU and Turkey have Struck Plan to Stem Flow of Migrants

BERLIN - The European Commission has worked out an action plan with Turkey to stem the flow of refugees to Europe. A German newspaper cited sources as saying on Sunday that there was no agreement on the plan as Turkey was still demanding better protection for its borders and better cooperation on illegal smuggling in the eastern Aegean, criticized by the EU's border management agency, which wants all refugees back to Turkey.
