North Korea, US Resume Nuclear Diplomacy with Sweden Talks

BEIJING— On Monday, Sweden's foreign minister and US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo said talks between the two countries on North Korea's nuclear program are ongoing. This follows a statement from Sweden's foreign minister that it is preparing for talks on the nuclear program with North Korea. He also said that the discussions are being held on a regular basis through diplomatic channels.

The talks between Sweden and the US are part of efforts to resume nuclear diplomacy with North Korea. Sweden has been a mediator in talks between the US and North Korea in the past, and has been working to facilitate negotiations between the two countries.

The Swedish foreign minister said that the talks are aimed at finding a way to resolve the nuclear crisis on the Korean Peninsula. He added that the Swedish government is committed to working closely with the US and other countries to achieve a peaceful resolution.

The talks come as tensions between North Korea and the US have increased in recent months. In August, North Korea tested a new intercontinental ballistic missile, prompting calls for new sanctions against the country.

The US has been seeking to engage North Korea in talks on its nuclear program through direct diplomacy, but so far, no major breakthroughs have been achieved.

The Swedish foreign minister said that the talks are being held in a constructive and professional manner, and that he is confident that progress will be made in the coming weeks.

The Swedish foreign minister also expressed hope that the talks will lead to a peaceful resolution of the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue.

He added that the Swedish government remains committed to working with the US and other countries to achieve a peaceful resolution of the crisis.

The Swedish foreign minister said that the talks are being held in a constructive and professional manner, and that he is confident that progress will be made in the coming weeks.

The Swedish foreign minister also expressed hope that the talks will lead to a peaceful resolution of the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue.

He added that the Swedish government remains committed to working with the US and other countries to achieve a peaceful resolution of the crisis.

The Swedish foreign minister said that the talks are being held in a constructive and professional manner, and that he is confident that progress will be made in the coming weeks.

The Swedish foreign minister also expressed hope that the talks will lead to a peaceful resolution of the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue.

He added that the Swedish government remains committed to working with the US and other countries to achieve a peaceful resolution of the crisis.