Rhodes, Greece - In her speech at the World Affairs at Greece Forum Wednesday, Merkle, Germany’s chancellor, outlined a series of measures to counter the country’s worsening economic situation, including a plan to boost exports and investment, and measures to support the business sector.

The German leader highlighted the need for more investment in the country to stimulate growth and create jobs. She emphasized the importance of international cooperation to achieve these goals, and called for closer ties with the EU and other partners. Merkle also spoke about the importance of investing in education and training to create a skilled workforce.

The German chancellor further elaborated on the measures she believes are necessary to address the country’s economic challenges. She outlined plans to reduce corporate taxes, cut red tape, and improve the regulatory environment to make it easier for businesses to operate.

Merkel also touched on the issue of refugees, saying that Germany needs to find a balanced approach to managing the flow of migrants. She noted the importance of working closely with the international community to address the root causes of migration.

The German leader’s speech was widely praised by observers, who praised her approach to addressing the country’s economic challenges. The speech was delivered at the World Affairs at Greece Forum, an annual event that brings together leaders from around the world to discuss key issues of the day.
