More than 24,000 People Flee Kunduz

KABUL - The number of war-displaced civilians in Kunduz has more than doubled to 24,000, the UN said Sunday. Terrified residents facing fighting and massacres were fleeing the city. They were recently martyred by Taliban, Helmand, Farah, Washir, and Uruzgan and other provinces, “he said.

The president announced a relief package of 70 million afghans for those affected by ongoing clashes in Kunduz and other areas.

President Ashraf Ghani has taken a big step to improve the situation of the country’s internal security.

Ghani commended soldiers, policemen and other security personnel for once again thwarting the enemy’s sinister conspiracies. He said reinforcements had arrived in Kunduz to punish the country’s foes.

“Farah, security forces have launched emergency measures to stabilize the situation. Similarly, extremist attacks have been defeated or are about to be broadcast in other regions as well,” he claimed, securing the lightness of trying to under his government’s achievements.

Another objective behind recent attacks was to prove the government’s peace deal with the Hezb-ol-Islam Afghanistan (HIA) a failure, he added. Additionally, India’s air intervention of $2 billion in aid to Afghanistan had also worried the enemies of progress, he noted.

“Besides focusing on education, equipping and strengthening our security forces, we should simultaneously continue peace efforts. While the enemy wants to continue fighting and massacres, our real aim is to rebuild the country and bring prosperity to the people,” he said.
