Terrorism, opium and corruptions: the catastrophic triangle in Afghanistan

By: Mohammad Zahir Akbari

After last decades, Afghanistan has been suffering from three interconnected issues: Terrorism, opium and corruption. These three issues are like three legs of the triangle, which are interrelated and are all necessary for each other. These issues affect the national security, the socio-economic environment and the political system. To tackle these issues, the Afghan government, the international community, and the regional stakeholders need to put their weight behind the talks so as to pressure the Taliban to achieve a political solution to the problem.

It has been claimed that drug traffickers have been arrested by security forces, but only after their escape. The judiciary system is also blamed for corruption and misdeeds of criminals without being punished. Accusations against the security forces and other areas are more engaged with drug trafficking and fighting a war against corruption to continue with their political goals.

Afghanistan has a modest achievement in the past years. But the whole world is urged to be cautious and.Controls on their succession to the political power in the unstable situation. The international community needs to pressure the Taliban to achieve a political solution.

As much as terrorism benefits from the narcotics cultivation and considered one of the most important sources for the funding of terrorist organizations, it is also needed to have control over trade and transportation centers. In the Middle East, the arms trade is a key factor in the war. Thus, the security forces are more engaged in drug trafficking centers. In the West, they perform their activities.

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Most Kind

Afgans have been suffering from three interconnected issues: Terrorism, opium and corruption. These issues affect the national security, the socio-economic environment and the political system. To tackle these issues, the Afghan government, the international community, and the regional stakeholders need to put their weight behind the talks so as to pressure the Taliban to achieve a political solution to the problem.

NYA KAKH,D – It is daunting that Turkey’s military operation in northeastern Syria is being spun in the American news media as a “humanitarian mission” and as a sign of alliances against the terrorists. This is being used as a weapon to oppose the Syrian Kurds, who have made great efforts in the past years to achieve a political solution to the Syrian conflict.

As much as terrorism benefits from the narcotics cultivation and considered one of the most important sources for the funding of terrorist organizations, it is also needed to have control over trade and transportation centers. In the Middle East, the arms trade is a key factor in the war. Thus, the security forces are more engaged in drug trafficking centers. In the West, they perform their activities.

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Most Kind

Afgans have been suffering from three interconnected issues: Terrorism, opium and corruption. These issues affect the national security, the socio-economic environment and the political system. To tackle these issues, the Afghan government, the international community, and the regional stakeholders need to put their weight behind the talks so as to pressure the Taliban to achieve a political solution to the problem.

Afgans have been suffering from three interconnected issues: Terrorism, opium and corruption. These issues affect the national security, the socio-economic environment and the political system. To tackle these issues, the Afghan government, the international community, and the regional stakeholders need to put their weight behind the talks so as to pressure the Taliban to achieve a political solution to the problem.

Previous page

Peace Process - A Controversial Issue without Result

Afgans have been suffering from three interconnected issues: Terrorism, opium and corruption. These issues affect the national security, the socio-economic environment and the political system. To tackle these issues, the Afghan government, the international community, and the regional stakeholders need to put their weight behind the talks so as to pressure the Taliban to achieve a political solution to the problem.

Turkey has provided shelter to large numbers of refugees from northeastern Syria. This is being used as a weapon to oppose the Syrian Kurds, who have made great efforts in the past years to achieve a political solution to the Syrian conflict. Turkey has shared our bread and the benefits of our public services.

Turkey is the biggest humanitarian supplier in the world and hosts most refugees worldwide.

According to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Turkey has hosted more than 3.6 million Syrian refugees. The country has also been a major contributor to the global humanitarian response, providing assistance to millions of people across the globe.

Violations of Panchsheel principles by super powers in South Asia

By: Dr Rajkumar Singh

The Panchsheel principles, which were established in 1954, are based on the principles of non-aggression, non-interference, equality, sovereignty and self-determination. These principles are important for maintaining peace and stability in the region.

According to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Turkey has hosted more than 3.6 million Syrian refugees. The country has also been a major contributor to the global humanitarian response, providing assistance to millions of people across the globe.

The Panchsheel principles, which were established in 1954, are based on the principles of non-aggression, non-interference, equality, sovereignty and self-determination. These principles are important for maintaining peace and stability in the region.

According to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Turkey has hosted more than 3.6 million Syrian refugees. The country has also been a major contributor to the global humanitarian response, providing assistance to millions of people across the globe.

The Panchsheel principles, which were established in 1954, are based on the principles of non-aggression, non-interference, equality, sovereignty and self-determination. These principles are important for maintaining peace and stability in the region.

According to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Turkey has hosted more than 3.6 million Syrian refugees. The country has also been a major contributor to the global humanitarian response, providing assistance to millions of people across the globe.

The Panchsheel principles, which were established in 1954, are based on the principles of non-aggression, non-interference, equality, sovereignty and self-determination. These principles are important for maintaining peace and stability in the region.

According to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Turkey has hosted more than 3.6 million Syrian refugees. The country has also been a major contributor to the global humanitarian response, providing assistance to millions of people across the globe.

The Panchsheel principles, which were established in 1954, are based on the principles of non-aggression, non-interference, equality, sovereignty and self-determination. These principles are important for maintaining peace and stability in the region.