LONDON - Former US presidential candidate Hillary Clinton has written an open letter to Prime Minister Theresa May urging the UK to continue with the current trade agreements with the United States and to avoid any snap vote on leaving the EU, following the referendum result in June.

The British government has been accused of having failed to prepare adequately for the possibility of leaving the EU without a deal, and the referendum result has led to a period of political uncertainty in the country.

In her letter, Clinton praised the close relationship between the UK and the US, particularly in areas such as trade and security, and urged the UK to stay in the EU to maintain these relations.

She also expressed concern about the impact of Brexit on the economy, noting that the UK’s departure from the single market and customs union could have negative consequences for businesses and workers.

Clinton ended her letter by urging the UK to remain in the EU, emphasizing that it is in the best interests of both countries to maintain their close relationship.

Her letter has been widely praised by UK politicians and business leaders, who have expressed support for her stance. Many have highlighted the importance of a strong UK-US relationship, particularly in the areas of trade, security, and defence.

However, some have criticized Clinton’s letter, arguing that it is too prescriptive and that it does not take into account the voices of the people who voted to leave the EU in the referendum.

The UK government has yet to respond to Clinton’s letter, but it is expected to do so in the coming weeks. The British prime minister, Theresa May, is expected to make a statement on the UK’s plans for Brexit in the near future.

In the meantime, the UK and the US are continuing to negotiate trade deals, with talks on a post-Brexit free trade agreement expected to take place in the coming months.

The Brexit referendum was held on June 23, 2016, and the UK voted to leave the EU by a margin of 52% to 48%. Since then, the country has been in a period of political uncertainty, with a new prime minister and government taking office in the UK.
