ALP Family Which Lost 9 Members Needs Aid

GARDEZ - A family, which lost nine members to the war with Taliban militants, has been in an urgent need of assistance in Ahmadkoh district of southeastern Pakhtika province.

Women and orphaned children of the family have been currently living in Askari family area of Gardez, the provincial capital.

Gulab, who takes care of the family, told Pajhwok Afghan News that they led the entire family of women and children with his daily wages.

Gulab recalled he had formed an Afghan Local Police (ALP) force in the Ahmadkoh district and later he lost nine members of his family in conflicts with Taliban militants during the past four years.

He said there were nine widows and dozens of orphaned children in his family and he brought them food through daily labor.

"He said, "Each widow has to take seven children and taking care of such big family is difficult and hard."

He further said so far government or non-governmental organization had helped them.

He accused the labour, social affairs, martyrs and disabled department of withholding two years of salaries of such widows’ husbands.

He urged Taliban militants to de- clare a true lasting peace in the country as war only resulted in deaths.

He called on all the warning parties to meet such children and women and listened to their complaints and demands. "We know that war is the name of destruction and Taliban should announce peace," he added.

Khalidial, a widow, told Pajhwok she was suffering from mental illness since losing her husband to the ongoing conflict. She has five children.

She collected empty bottles and plastics and sold them to feed her family. "After my husband was martyred, I developed mental problem and now I am living with Galal, my husband’s cousin."

Another widow told Pajhwok that they left their area after Taliban militants started their activities and now she was living in Gardez with her family.

She said, "My husband was the only son of my father-in-law, but my father-in-law also died. I have no son but seven children. My husband was also disabled and we are living with his husband’s cousins.’’

What would bring the US and EU officials to Tripoli, Afghanistan?

By: Mohammad Zahir Akbari

In recent days, Kabul was hosting the US and EU top officials following a different approach to political conflict-resolution. According to analysis, the chances for reviving talks between the US and Taliban are boosted with the US and EU top officials’ trip to Afghanistan. In last 18 years, the EU had always a clearer position regarding peace and war of Afghanistan. They have had meaningful cooperation in regards to inspection and other political affairs of the country. In line to this, the EU Envoy to Afghanistan, Roland Kelber, expressed a clear and hopeful stance in regards to reunion of peace negotiation between the US and the Taliban. Kelber said that the resumption of talks between the US and Taliban should lead to a ceasefire and the start of intra-Afghan talks. "The EU would like to see the re-negotiation of the US-Islamabad talks and the start of negotiation between the government and the Taliban," said Kelber.

He added that all the gates that Afghanistan has made in the past years should be protected. If the government was like the Islamic Emirate when these rights were not protected, it would be a very difficult for Europeans to help the reconciliation, to provide development and to give access to the humanitarian market. The EU diplomacy also called on the Afghan Presidential candidates to contribute to the transparency of the election process and avoid any moves that could create problems on the election results. "We also understand that the election process is always political and that it can create a lot of tension, a lot of difficulties – we also believe that the peace and the elections are not complete and they do not oppose each other," defined Kelber.

The EU Envoy trip to Afghanistan was almost simultaneous with the announcement of the US and EU mission of Defense, Marine Corps, and Air Force. Seemingly, the main purpose of his announcement was to visit Kabul was to talk to the US military officials and discuss issues related to Afghanistan. According to the Presidential Spokesman, Sadq Sediqi, President Ashraf Ghani had a meeting with Esper where they discussed the upcoming efforts related to Afghan peace, regional issues, and the peace process. The US now has a stronger National Defense Security Forces.

After the intra-Afghan talks and US withdrawal, many of the US presidential candidates believe that the EU after President Donald Trump announced that Washington was pulling out of the talks after the Taliban claimed an attack that killed 12 US soldiers, including 1 soldier killed in Kabul, including 3 children. Apparently, the Trump administration wants to insert the new clause in the municipal agreement that making the Taliban will not be able to continue to argue to its cause in case of needed goodwill.

However, previously Taliban refused to agree on ceasefire or reduce violence in Afghanistan and it was effective in the collapse of year-long, lasting, panicking talks. So, there is no certainty whether the Taliban retreat or not.

Amnesty, the deadlock must be broken in one way or the other. Based on the Trump administration has a desire to reduce the number of US troops in Afghanistan, although there are serious issues and challenges to overcome. The US has already released 11 Taliban detainees from Bagram prison in exchange for three Indian engineers. The likelihood of resumption of talks after US Special Representative for Afghanistan Reconciliation Zalmay Khalilzad’s recent meeting with Taliban leaders in Islamabad has also elevated. He had treated that a political settlement that safeguards the US from terrorist threats, allows it to reduce the burden of war and protects two decades of progress in Afghanistan was in American national interest.

To some analysts, this week's diplomacy meeting between the Taliban delegation and Pakistani officials was highly significant. It was the first high-profile interaction between the two sides back on track. Pakistani officials have reportedly reiterated the assurance to agree to a ceasefire. But the main issue is no indication from Taliban whether change their stance or not. Some observers believe that they have issued the upper hand on the battlefield, there is no incentive for the Taliban to accept a ceasefire without a deal in place. That makes the resumption of the peace process more difficult.

On the other side, being in the process of fighting the Taliban, the US administration needs something to sell to the American public by taking credit for bringing an end to the US involvement in the nearly 18-year-old war in order to boost his re-election bid for The White House while the intensity of violence continues to raise concerns for public opinion. The recent several months have seen an unspecified spike in violence throughout the country, leaving behind heavy casualties not only for the military sides but also for civilians. But the higher the level of violence, the greater the need for peace.

The US envoy to Afghanistan insists that the process of talks should focus primarily on passing the ground for intra-Afghan negotiations and not on the US withdrawal. But this didn’t happen. As the US position evolved, the Trump administration seems to have abandoned the deadlocked peace process. The US now seems to give the EU and the UN the responsibility of bringing an end to the Afghan conflict.
