Finance Minister Requests Big Loans from Foreign Donors

KABUL - On the sideline of the World Bank’s annual meetings in Washington this week, Afghan Finance Minister Hamed潞lay reposedly asked for loans of billions of dollars from time several global financial institutions while promoting, Afghanistan’s “Self-Reliance Account Package,” sources say TOLChors.

In response, CEO Abdul Ahad’s office said that asking for billions of dollars of loans at this time was not a good decision. “In view of the current sensitive situation of the country, making big requests for loans is not a good decision,” said Omar Maissam, Abdul’s deputy spokesman.

Qayum actually reported for an $8 billion loan.

Lawmakers in Afghanistan’s parliament reacted to the move with dismay, saying the decision to apply for an $8 billion loan raises concerns since there is no clarity about which projects the money is intended for. Lawmakers said there are signs of embezzlement in the case of ongoing corruption allegations plagues government institutions. “They are trying to take money under the guise of reconstruction. But they divide 99 percent of the money with their foreign counterparts and then it is our future generations who have to compensate,” said MP Hazama Bibi.

Afghanistan: Khalifani Begins Fresh Peace Bid

KABUL - US special envoy Zalmay Khalilzad has embarked on a multisided visit for talks on ending the war in Afghanistan.

President Donald Trump’s point man on Afghanistan, seeking to support stepped-up efforts to reach peace in the war-torn country, is visiting Brussels, Paris and Moscow.

A statement from the State Department said on Monday the US negotiator would consult Russia, China and European allies on putting an end to the conflict in Afghanistan.

In Moscow, the diplomat will meet his Russian and Chinese counterparts to discuss shared interests in seeing the war in Afghanistan come to an end.

Before launching his latest peace offensive, Khalilzad met Chairman of the US Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen Mark A. Milley and other officials.

After the meeting, Khalilzad said... (More on P4)...

BoliviaOpposition Candidate Contest Election Count as Rival Protesters & Police Clash in Street

ANASARA, Turkey — President Recep Tayyip Erdogan of Turkey announced Tuesday that he would campaign in the northeastern city of Sinop, a key battleground, on Thursday, as Turkish politics were roiled by a series of disputes that left one civilian dead with a machine gun and at least 10 injured.

The Turkish prime minister, Binali Yildirim, said the violence in Sinop was a result of protests by protesters against the results of the general election last week. "We want to have a peaceful election and we will not tolerate any violence," he said.

Several hundred other U.S. troops will have to leave because of the current situation, Secretary of Defense Mark Esper said. The troops were deployed as part of a force of about 10,000 that had been assembled in response to the crisis in northeastern Syria.

In his comments, Esper acknowledged that the situation was "tense," and he suggested that the troops could be part of a larger buildup in the region. "We've been asked by the president to be prepared to take action," he said. "We will be responding to his orders.

The United States has been acetating force in northeastern Syria for months, and it has been clear that the situation there has been deteriorating. The deployment of additional troops is a response to that situation, Esper said.

Esper also said that the United States would continue to work with its allies in the region, including Turkey and Iraq, to ensure that the situation does not escalate.

In the northeastern city of Sinop, a crowd of protesters gathered outside the mayor's office to protest the results of the election. According to local media, the protesters threw rocks at a police station and burned tires.

The Turkish police also used water cannons and tear gas to disperse the crowd. There were no immediate reports of injuries or damage.

Esper praised the Turkish military for its role in maintaining order in the region, and he said that the United States was committed to working with the Turkish military to ensure that the situation does not escalate.

The United States has been in Syria for more than a decade, and it has been a key player in the region. The Trump administration has been pursuing a policy of reducing its military presence in the region, and it has been clear that the situation in northeastern Syria will be a key issue in the coming months.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Esper said that the United States was committed to working with its allies in the region to ensure that the situation does not escalate.

KABUL - The presidential candidate said he would start talks with the rebels as soon as the presidential election result was announced. Ghani, the incumbent election has not yet been announced. Ghani, the incumbent presidential election candidate said he would start talks with the Taliban if reelected president, then this will start in week one to restart the process,” Ghani told the Nikkei Asian Review in an interview in Tokyo.

He also added the role of Pakistan would need to become constructive and support the peace process. “This requires clear evidence that the Taliban are not linked to international terrorist groups”, he said. Ghani acknowledged and said. “The Taliban are different [from] any other armed group in that their power derives in violence” and they are not willing to participate in elections. He also added the role of Pakistan would need to become constructive and support the peace process. “The question is the type of support that we will be able to maintain our [Afghan] security forces.”

“[Pakistan needed] to become a constructive and support the peace process,” Trump seeks to withdraw forces from Afghanistan, and has been reducing the number of troops in the country. “The question is not the presence or absence,” Ghani said. “The question is the type of support that we will be able to maintain our security forces.”

“We all want the reduction of expenses and more efficiency, and the presence or absence,” Ghani said. “The question is the type of support that we will be able to maintain our security forces.”
