The creative breakthrough in the 3D blood vessel-bioprinting means there is potential to "print" islands based on 3D-bioprinting technology," said Van Kiem, chairman of the Vietnam Academy of Science and Technology (VAST).

"You also said ['Pakistan'] had brought the war to their homeland," the Afghan commander said.

Meanwhile, in capital Kabul, the Taliban's campaign of violence, which has been described as unprecedented, continued, with several explosions reported in the city and its outskirts.

While many believe the Taliban's tactics have been effective, the Afghan government and its international allies have shown no signs of giving in.

The Taliban have insisted on engaging in talks with the United States and other countries, but it is not clear what kind of support would be offered.

In recent weeks, the Taliban have launched a major offensive in several provinces, including Kunduz and Baghlan, which have historically been areas of turmoil.

Afghan officials have refused to engage in direct talks with the Taliban, saying it is a matter of principle for them to return to the negotiating table.

However, the situation remains tense, with both sides continuing to exchange gunfire and mortar shells.

The U.S. military has been training and advising the Afghan forces, but it is not clear how effective these efforts have been.

Despite the challenges, the Afghan government and its allies have been working to strengthen the Afghan military and expand its capabilities.

The U.S. and its allies have been providing significant support to the Afghan forces, including training, equipment, and financial assistance.

The Afghan forces have made some progress in recent months, but they still face significant challenges.

The situation in Afghanistan is complex, with multiple actors and interests at play.

The Afghan government and its allies must continue to work together to find a solution to the conflict, which has been going on for over a decade.

The U.S. and its allies must also continue to provide support to the Afghan forces, but it is not clear how long this support will continue.

The future of the situation in Afghanistan remains uncertain, with both sides continuing to engage in violence.

The Afghan government and its allies must continue to work together to find a peaceful solution to the conflict.