By: Rajmangal Singh

There are numerous actors involved in the current Afghan conflict, each one seeks its interests at three levels (global, regional, and domestic). These actors include the Taliban, the Afghan government, and other political actors among the most important actors in the conflict while one at the international level and other at the domestic level seeking to fulfill their own demands. The US and the Taliban have apparently come to an agreement in forming a new government in Afghanistan. The US has been looking for a way to reduce the violence in the country but the Taliban have not yet fully committed to the deal. According to some reports, the Taliban may have agreed to work with the Afghan government.

The Taliban is a very complex issue in Afghanistan, still a controversial issue with many views, and in the talks, the Taliban has not yet agreed to hand over their military to the Afghan government. However, with the agreement reached between the US and the Taliban, the US government has sent a clear signal that it will reduce violence in the country. The Afghan government has welcomed the agreement, but it is not clear if the Taliban will follow through with the agreement. Despite the agreement, there are still many concerns about the implementation of the agreement.
