Afghans Impregnable on Sectarian Lines, Ghani

President Ashraf Ghani during a meeting with Sunni and Shiite scholars has urged them to expose real intention of terrorists in their sermons and promote religious harmony.

US Defense Secretary Orders New Troop Deployment to Afghanistan

KABUL - The president, who met the religious scholars at the Presidential Palace on Friday afternoon, urged them to expose real intention of terrorists in their sermons and promote religious harmony.

KABUL - US Defense Secretary James Mattis has said that he has signed deployment orders to send more troops to Afghanistan, days after President Donald Trump announced a new strategy to prolong war in the strategically important country located within South Asia and Central Asia. APA reports quoting Press TV. “Yes, I’ve signed orders, but it’s not complete. In other words, I’ve signed off on the [orders for] troops that will go and we are identifying the specific ones,” Mattis told reporters at the Pentagon on Thursday.

KABUL - The Pentagon chief did not say how many troops would be deployed as part of the deployment orders. “By and large this is to enable the Afghan forces to fight more effectively. It’s a more enabling, fixed support, for example, and there’s some other things,” Mattis said.

Mattis said the additional troops, which could reportedly approach 4,000, were not on the way to Kabul yet. “I just signed the order, it’s going to take a couple days,” he said.

On Wednesday, the US military officially acknowledged the 11,000 troops already in the country. “By and large this is to enable the Afghan forces to fight more effectively. It’s a more enabling, fixed support, for example, and there’s some other things,” Mattis said. The Pakistan state media noted that the troops already in the country were described by the US military as part of the satanic plot, which he said could be prevented by the religious scholars and communities.

Mattis said the additional troops, which could reportedly approach 4,000, were not on the way to Kabul yet. “I just signed the order, it’s going to take a couple days,” he said.

On Wednesday, the US military officially acknowledged the 11,000 troops already in the country. “By and large this is to enable the Afghan forces to fight more effectively. It’s a more enabling, fixed support, for example, and there’s some other things,” Mattis said. The Pakistan state media noted that the troops already in the country were described by the US military as part of the satanic plot, which he said could be prevented by the religious scholars and communities.

Mattis said the additional troops, which could reportedly approach 4,000, were not on the way to Kabul yet. “I just signed the order, it’s going to take a couple days,” he said.

On Wednesday, the US military officially acknowledged the 11,000 troops already in the country. “By and large this is to enable the Afghan forces to fight more effectively. It’s a more enabling, fixed support, for example, and there’s some other things,” Mattis said. The Pakistan state media noted that the troops already in the country were described by the US military as part of the satanic plot, which he said could be prevented by the religious scholars and communities.

Mattis said the additional troops, which could reportedly approach 4,000, were not on the way to Kabul yet. “I just signed the order, it’s going to take a couple days,” he said.

On Wednesday, the US military officially acknowledged the 11,000 troops already in the country. “By and large this is to enable the Afghan forces to fight more effectively. It’s a more enabling, fixed support, for example, and there’s some other things,” Mattis said. The Pakistan state media noted that the troops already in the country were described by the US military as part of the satanic plot, which he said could be prevented by the religious scholars and communities.

Mattis said the additional troops, which could reportedly approach 4,000, were not on the way to Kabul yet. “I just signed the order, it’s going to take a couple days,” he said.

On Wednesday, the US military officially acknowledged the 11,000 troops already in the country. “By and large this is to enable the Afghan forces to fight more effectively. It’s a more enabling, fixed support, for example, and there’s some other things,” Mattis said. The Pakistan state media noted that the troops already in the country were described by the US military as part of the satanic plot, which he said could be prevented by the religious scholars and communities.

Mattis said the additional troops, which could reportedly approach 4,000, were not on the way to Kabul yet. “I just signed the order, it’s going to take a couple days,” he said.

On Wednesday, the US military officially acknowledged the 11,000 troops already in the country. “By and large this is to enable the Afghan forces to fight more effectively. It’s a more enabling, fixed support, for example, and there’s some other things,” Mattis said. The Pakistan state media noted that the troops already in the country were described by the US military as part of the satanic plot, which he said could be prevented by the religious scholars and communities.

Mattis said the additional troops, which could reportedly approach 4,000, were not on the way to Kabul yet. “I just signed the order, it’s going to take a couple days,” he said.

On Wednesday, the US military officially acknowledged the 11,000 troops already in the country. “By and large this is to enable the Afghan forces to fight more effectively. It’s a more enabling, fixed support, for example, and there’s some other things,” Mattis said. The Pakistan state media noted that the troops already in the country were described by the US military as part of the satanic plot, which he said could be prevented by the religious scholars and communities.

Mattis said the additional troops, which could reportedly approach 4,000, were not on the way to Kabul yet. “I just signed the order, it’s going to take a couple days,” he said.

On Wednesday, the US military officially acknowledged the 11,000 troops already in the country. “By and large this is to enable the Afghan forces to fight more effectively. It’s a more enabling, fixed support, for example, and there’s some other things,” Mattis said. The Pakistan state media noted that the troops already in the country were described by the US military as part of the satanic plot, which he said could be prevented by the religious scholars and communities.

Mattis said the additional troops, which could reportedly approach 4,000, were not on the way to Kabul yet. “I just signed the order, it’s going to take a couple days,” he said.

On Wednesday, the US military officially acknowledged the 11,000 troops already in the country. “By and large this is to enable the Afghan forces to fight more effectively. It’s a more enabling, fixed support, for example, and there’s some other things,” Mattis said. The Pakistan state media noted that the troops already in the country were described by the US military as part of the satanic plot, which he said could be prevented by the religious scholars and communities.

Mattis said the additional troops, which could reportedly approach 4,000, were not on the way to Kabul yet. “I just signed the order, it’s going to take a couple days,” he said.

On Wednesday, the US military officially acknowledged the 11,000 troops already in the country. “By and large this is to enable the Afghan forces to fight more effectively. It’s a more enabling, fixed support, for example, and there’s some other things,” Mattis said. The Pakistan state media noted that the troops already in the country were described by the US military as part of the satanic plot, which he said could be prevented by the religious scholars and communities.

Mattis said the additional troops, which could reportedly approach 4,000, were not on the way to Kabul yet. “I just signed the order, it’s going to take a couple days,” he said.

On Wednesday, the US military officially acknowledged the 11,000 troops already in the country. “By and large this is to enable the Afghan forces to fight more effectively. It’s a more enabling, fixed support, for example, and there’s some other things,” Mattis said. The Pakistan state media noted that the troops already in the country were described by the US military as part of the satanic plot, which he said could be prevented by the religious scholars and communities.

Mattis said the additional troops, which could reportedly approach 4,000, were not on the way to Kabul yet. “I just signed the order, it’s going to take a couple days,” he said.