Causes and Cures of Terrorism in Today’s Context

By: Rajkumar Singh

In the age of global terror tactics targeted by terrorist campaigns find their roots in a situation where they feel that they have no say in the policies that concern them. Terrorists are motivated by a sense of injustice, humiliation, and a desire for revenge. They are driven by a sense of victimization, and they seek redress for past injustices and perceived wrongs.

In combating terrorism three distinct functions are involved. They relate to pre-emptive measures, law enforcement, and intelligence. Pre-emptive measures involve preventing the terrorist from carrying out an attack. Law enforcement involves the use of force to suppress an ongoing attack. Intelligence involves the gathering of information about terrorist activities.

In combating terrorism, the US and other countries have developed a system of intelligence gathering. This system involves the sharing of information between governments, security agencies, and other organizations. The goal is to identify potential threats and prevent them from materializing.

In a democratic system, men are all equal; equal they are passed by these leaders for the benefit of the entire republic. The sharing of expertise, institutions, policy tools, personnel and resources among various entities is essential for the effective management of the various functions of the government.

In order to combat terrorism, countries must work together to establish a global coalition against terrorism. This coalition must be inclusive and diverse, with members from all parts of the world.
