Poorest Leadership in Security Agencies
Main Reason for Insecurity: MPs

KABUL - A number of Parliament members have stated that weakness in leadership of security institutions led to the ongoing insecurity in the country. Parliament members declared that security officials have failed in providing security and it caused terrorism to achieve their targets. “We lose dozens of men and women everyday; Peoples’ mistakes was just voting for incompetent leaders. In the current situation, we need some ministers who can strongly fight against terrorists. The current ministers cannot even provide the security of their own,” said Ramzan Kabulzada, member of parliament.

In the meantime, a number of lawmakers praised Afghan forces’ resistance and sacrifices but stressed on assigning professional individuals in the country’s intelligence.

“We lose dozens of men and women everyday; Peoples’ mistakes was just voting for incompetent leaders. In the current situation, we need some ministers who can strongly fight against terrorists. The current ministers cannot even provide the security of their own,” said Ramzan Kabulzada, member of parliament.

The Afghan security forces did exhibit some praiseworthy capabilities in suppressing the Taliban and derailing the militants to take any major areas for long. Intelligence is Achiles’ heel of the Afghan government forces in the campaign against the insurgents. The Afghan forces heavily rely on NATO-led coalition in major areas such as Anbar in (MP) ...

Parliament members declared that security officials have failed in providing security and it caused terrorism to achieve their targets. “We lose dozens of men and women everyday; Peoples’ mistakes was just voting for incompetent leaders. In the current situation, we need some ministers who can strongly fight against terrorists. The current ministers cannot even provide the security of their own,” said Ramzan Kabulzada, member of parliament.

In the meantime, a number of lawmakers praised Afghan forces’ resistance and sacrifices but stressed on assigning professional individuals in the country’s intelligence.

“We lose dozens of men and women everyday; Peoples’ mistakes was just voting for incompetent leaders. In the current situation, we need some ministers who can strongly fight against terrorists. The current ministers cannot even provide the security of their own,” said Ramzan Kabulzada, member of parliament.

In the meantime, a number of lawmakers praised Afghan forces’ resistance and sacrifices but stressed on assigning professional individuals in the country’s intelligence.

“We lose dozens of men and women everyday; Peoples’ mistakes was just voting for incompetent leaders. In the current situation, we need some ministers who can strongly fight against terrorists. The current ministers cannot even provide the security of their own,” said Ramzan Kabulzada, member of parliament.

In the meantime, a number of lawmakers praised Afghan forces’ resistance and sacrifices but stressed on assigning professional individuals in the country’s intelligence.

“We lose dozens of men and women everyday; Peoples’ mistakes was just voting for incompetent leaders. In the current situation, we need some ministers who can strongly fight against terrorists. The current ministers cannot even provide the security of their own,” said Ramzan Kabulzada, member of parliament.