Growing Concern over US-Taliban Peace Deal

By: Mohammad Zahir Akbari

September 07, 2019

The US-Taliban peace talks that were set to be resolved in intra-Afghan dialogue. After US Special Envoy Zalmay Khalilzad briefed Afghan leaders, including President Mohammad Ashraf Ghani, in Kabul, Ghani announced that the Taliban government would not sign what it described as “shameful agreements.” Khalilzad called the Taliban’s “representation” for the Afghan government, which he called the “Taliban.”

Now, as Khalilzad is working to conclude a deal with the Taliban government before the deal is signed, Afghan officials are concerned about the draft, drafted behind closed doors, and the fears that it will not be able to any human.

The backdoor talks left Afghan people in the dark about their future, their rights, and their rights. Therefore, many people are seriously following the news with great concern about the agreement to be signed with the Taliban. In fact, the increasing concern of people originates from two main issues: unmonitorable peace talks and the Taliban’s views on the future of Afghanistan.

The backdoor talks left Afghan people in the dark about their future, their rights, and their rights. Therefore, many people are seriously following the news with great concern about the agreement to be signed with the Taliban. In fact, the increasing concern of people originates from two main issues: unmonitorable peace talks and the Taliban’s views on the future of Afghanistan.

The backdoor talks left Afghan people in the dark about their future, their rights, and their rights. Therefore, many people are seriously following the news with great concern about the agreement to be signed with the Taliban. In fact, the increasing concern of people originates from two main issues: unmonitorable peace talks and the Taliban’s views on the future of Afghanistan.

The backdoor talks left Afghan people in the dark about their future, their rights, and their rights. Therefore, many people are seriously following the news with great concern about the agreement to be signed with the Taliban. In fact, the increasing concern of people originates from two main issues: unmonitorable peace talks and the Taliban’s views on the future of Afghanistan.

The backdoor talks left Afghan people in the dark about their future, their rights, and their rights. Therefore, many people are seriously following the news with great concern about the agreement to be signed with the Taliban. In fact, the increasing concern of people originates from two main issues: unmonitorable peace talks and the Taliban’s views on the future of Afghanistan.

The backdoor talks left Afghan people in the dark about their future, their rights, and their rights. Therefore, many people are seriously following the news with great concern about the agreement to be signed with the Taliban. In fact, the increasing concern of people originates from two main issues: unmonitorable peace talks and the Taliban’s views on the future of Afghanistan.