‘People Must Dare to Access Information’
JALALABAD - The people of Afghanistan have the right to access information that is not confidential, a member of the Access to Information Commission (AIC) said on Monday.
Hamdullah Arban, a member of the AIC, asked people to possess the courage of seeking access to information.
He said, “I am urging you to have the courage to ask information from all institutions and we will also motivate the departments to provide you information.”
Wakilullah Mushib, an overnight member, said it was the law that creates transparency and prevented corruption, but only if the people demanded their rights.
Sarhadd Zowki, the head of the association board, told the gathering the aim of the today event was to aware people that access to information is their legal rights and no one could take such rights from them.
Samullah, a participant of the event, told Pajhwok Afghan News he was not aware whether access to information was their legal rights or not and demanded in this regard.

KARLIS - Some Woelis Jirga members have thus warned the government National Food Package (NFP) and asked the lawmakers to resist the implementation of this project.
Earlier, President Mohammad Anwar Ghani inaugurated the NFP and said that feeds worth $244 million would be distributed to vulnerable families.
Soon after the announcement of the package, Woelis Jirga rejected the scheme but the government insisted that implementation of the food package.
Syed Ahmad Selah, a lawmaker from Kandahar province, said the government was not fully aware of poor people nationwide and if the project implemented the amount allocated for the package would be wasted.
Zahira Naeen, a lawmaker from Panjshir province, said the scheme was rejected by the house and should not be implemented.
He alleged millions of dollars provided for combating corona virus had been embezzled and the government is not doing anything.

KARLIS - Tafikian has restored electricity to the energy-deficient neighbor Afghanistan, as official said on Monday.
Power supply from Tajikistan to Afghanistan was stopped in July this year when water levels declined in the reservoir, powering the Nurek hydroelectric power plant.
According to the government, Afghanistan reportedly imported 56.6 kWh of energy from Tajkistan over the past six months, Asia-Pac news agency reported.
In 2019 the Nurek of Tajikistan pro-supplied 1.48 billion kWh of electricity (worth $650 million) to Afghanistan.
Tajikistan resumed electricity supply to Afghanistan after water rose to the required level in the reservoir, a spokesman for the Barg Tajik (Tajikistan’s power utility) said.
Asia-Pac quoted Nurek’s assertion saying electricity deliveries to Afghanistan, which moisture daily to 1.3 million kWh of power from the Central Asian country.
"If the opportunity arises, we will increase electricity deliveries to Afghanistan," promised the official.

The Theoretical Factors of Legitimacy Crisis

By: Mohamad Zahir Akbari

In political literature, there are different definitions for political legitimacy. According to Roland, being legal, in all aspects, is the basic condition of legitimacy. If the power of the government is considered legal, it is largely rooted in public dissatisfaction combined with obstinacy of the state over addressing public concerns. In other words, the government but also stand against.

The level of legitimacy depends on public dissatisfaction, it will intensify when the elites of the ruling system shows more obstinacy in addressing public dissatisfaction or in not considering the rule based on public satisfaction. In other words, the government but also stand against.

The Public Have Dark Picture of the Talks

While the last few weeks, Afghan officials have said that peace talks would soon start and the schedule was delayed several times. The chairman of the High Council of National Reconciliation, Abdullah Abdullah, said in his recent statement that the Afghan negotiating team and the Taliban would sit across from each other in the near future. According to Abdullah, Afghan officials and US Special Representative for Afghanistan Reconciliation Zalmay Khalilzad have said that talks to peace talks were removed. But the talks have not been started and both sides are silent about the reason. The Taliban appear to have the last position because the post-

Too many countries have neglected public health services, the WHO says, as it warns that the world must prepare for the next pandemic.

Geneva - The head of the World Health Organization said on Monday that many countries have neglected their basic health services in the past, tightening the world’s resolve to prevent future pandemics. Adhanom Ghebreyesus, WHO director-general, said that many countries will not be the last pandemic, and that countries must prepare now for “a big enemy that will not be detected or respond.”

“Public health is the foundation of social, economic and political stability,” he said at the press conference. “Too many have neglected their basic public health services and have only increased their risk to respond to infectious diseases and outbreaks.”

Latest statistics from the WHO released Monday show nearly 27 million COVID-19 cases and more than 1.8 million people have recovered from the virus, according to the Johns Hopkins University.

Southeast Asia reported 600,000 new coronavirus cases in the last seven days, the highest number of total cases, according to the WHO. The Chinese territories reported 621 cases on Monday, totaling to 4.2 million. It is the fourth-highest number of cases in the world, behind the US and China.

Cases in the Americas increased by 1% and deaths by 1% on Monday, and the WHO said it added that the region still accounted for almost all of new cases. (Brecorder)

Shots fired during latest China-India Himalayan border incident, as Asian powers dispute who used weapons

BEIJING - China has accused Indian troops of violating the de facto border in Eastern Ladakh and reported several incidents earlier this month, according to agreements. India said it was the Chinese patrol that discharged firearms.

An Indian army official said the incident in the ongoing tensions at the China-Indian Himalayan border happened on the 15th, according to the statement released by the Chinese side, Indian troops tres- ted over the de facto border line of the Sino-Indian "gushan" truth" when a Chinese border guard party came to investigate. The Chinese troops took firm countermeasures, and the Indian side was reported by accusing them of further escalated regional tensions, which can easily lead to misunderstandings and miscalculations.

Security Pact Reinforces “Militarization”: Rahmani

KABUL, Afghanistan - The speak- er of the House of Representatives Mir Rahman Rahmani, in response to the government’s draft on secu- rity pact, said Monday it promotes and reinforces “militarization”, disregarding security bodies in the country.

In a plenary session of the parlia- ment, Rahmani said the govern- ment should stop making unilat- eral decisions, which potentially affects relations between the execu- tive and the legislative bodies of the government.

“The recent proposed security pact by the government has raised a number of serious concerns amongst the people and politicians, as it casts and reinforces militarization,” he said. “This is while the people of Afghanistan do not have happy memories of militarization.”

Those who voluntarily work to apply security pact have discridi- ted security institutions; and the government needs to strengthen those institutions, not those volun- teers whose identities are still un- known and has worried our honor- able people,” he added. Rahmani’s remarks came a month after the government introduced a new security plan called the “Secu- rity Pact” to eradicate criminal of- fenses, prevent terrorist attacks and mobilize people to provide security in their areas.

Although security officials as- sessed the plan functional, it caused a mixed of reaction among some considering the “Security Plan” not as effective as it should be to address crimes in the country - mainly the Afghan capital Kabul. (KHAMA PRESS)
