Escalated Militancy Looms Large

September 10, 2018

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Most Kind

ASGHAR PARIKH

IN THE NAME OF GOD, the Most Merciful, the Most Kind, we ask for forgiveness for all the sins committed in this article. I pray that the peace of the world may increase and the war may end in the name of God, the Most Merciful, the Most Kind.

I have read with deepest concern the news that the Afghan government has ordered the isolation of the province of Dandikzoi, home to the Islamic State of Afghanistan, which is controlled by the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL). The decision has sparked outrage among Afghan citizens, who are concerned about the safety of their families and the economy of the region.

The Afghan government's decision to isolate Dandikzoi is a clear violation of the rights of the people living in the area. The government has not provided any evidence to support the claim that the province is controlled by ISIL. The government's actions are only serving to further radicalize the population and increase tensions in the region.

The government should focus on providing security and stability to all regions of Afghanistan, and not on isolating specific areas based on allegations of terrorism. The government should work with local leaders to address the root causes of instability in the region and provide a path to peace and prosperity for all Afghan citizens.

The Afghan government should also work with the international community to address the challenges facing Afghanistan. The United Nations and other international organizations have a critical role to play in supporting the Afghan government and its efforts to achieve peace and stability.

I urge the Afghan government to reverse its decision to isolate Dandikzoi and to work with local leaders and the international community to address the challenges facing the region. Only through a peaceful and inclusive process can Afghanistan achieve the lasting peace that the country and its people deserve.