By: Mohammad Zahir Akbari

September 11, 2019

September 11, 2019, also called “Black Tuesday” has entered the contemporary history of the world as a landmark date. It reminded the prophetic words of George Tenet, the then CIA Director, who said in a classified briefing, “If you allow al Qaeda to strike again, it will be catastrophic.” The US military and its allies, including Afghans who felt relieved and happy, Afghan officials, analysts, and citizens warmly welcomed President Donald Trump’s announcement that he was calling off the Afghanistan war, and promised the Taliban and US forces would continue their war against the Afghan government and people. When Donald Trump cancelled a secret meeting with Taliban and Afghan leaders and announced in a bombing in Kabul, Afghanistan, one of the most powerful attacks against the US military and its allies, the Afghan public and officials were shocked and—unlike this time, failed to see the early draft that was seen in draft in 2001, and the Afghan government established the Afghan National Institute of Peace. As a consequence, everyone was afraid of the US military force. The US military was ordered to continue its war against the Afghan government and people.

However, the situation changed, and the US forces failed to negotiate with the Taliban and Afghan leaders. And in this case, he called off peace talks with the Taliban, and announced the US military force to continue the war against the Afghan government and people. According to them, the Taliban and US forces could bring about an end to the Afghan war, and promised the Taliban and US forces would continue their war against the Afghan government and people. When Donald Trump cancelled a secret meeting with Taliban and Afghan leaders and announced in a bombing in Kabul, Afghanistan, one of the most powerful attacks against the US military and its allies, the Afghan public and officials were shocked and—unlike this time, failed to see the early draft that was seen in draft in 2001, and the Afghan government established the Afghan National Institute of Peace. As a consequence, everyone was afraid of the US military force. The US military was ordered to continue its war against the Afghan government and people.