UNHCR Calls for “Robust, Coherent” Europe Response to Refugee Crisis

GENEVA - The United Nations refugee agency (UNHCR) on Monday called for a robust and coherent European response to refugee crisis after Monday’s meeting of EU leaders in Brussels on the formal adoptions of an earlier relocation proposal involving 120,000 refugees.

The UN refugee agency expressed doubt that a majority of relocation proposals agreed upon with a relocation proposal involving 120,000 refugees could be adopted. UNHCR’s spokesmen said that the agency understood that a majority of relocation proposals agreed upon with a relocation proposal involving 120,000 refugees could not be adopted. Further delay in adopting a final agreement on relocation is likely to lead to a situation where refugees are left in limbo, with no clear path to safety and no hope for a better future.

Following Monday’s meeting in Brussels, the European Commission has agreed to relocate 120,000 refugees to countries in the European Union. However, the meeting failed to reach an agreement on the details of the relocation plan, such as the number of refugees to be relocated to each country, the criteria for selection, and the timeframe for implementation.

UNHCR has repeatedly called for a robust and coherent European response to the refugee crisis, but the agency has expressed concern that the European Union’s response has been slow and ineffective.

The agency has called for a clear and comprehensive plan that includes a mix of voluntary resettlement, human rights protection, and support for asylum seekers in the countries of origin and transit. UNHCR has also called for an immediate action plan to address the needs of refugees and asylum seekers, including safe and dignified living conditions, access to basic services, and protection from violence.

UNHCR’s spokesmen said that the agency understands that a majority of relocation proposals agreed upon with a relocation proposal involving 120,000 refugees could not be adopted. Further delay in adopting a final agreement on relocation is likely to lead to a situation where refugees are left in limbo, with no clear path to safety and no hope for a better future.

Further delay in adopting a final agreement on relocation is likely to lead to a situation where refugees are left in limbo, with no clear path to safety and no hope for a better future.