Economy plays a vital role in development and progress of a country. With a sound economy, a country can see a fluctuation in its political and social boundaries. And, that power rests with the countries that have large GDPs and great businesses. Therefore, it is easy to see which country is in each and every case, including the different diplomatic undertakings and conflicts, wants in political international order. In fact, the competition for each and every country is stuck in the corner of competition among the developed nations of the world. The current political order, wherein capitalism and democracy have joined hands and reign most parts of the world is not very different from what the gigantic capitalist economies want them to be. A thorough study of economy and politics will reveal that economy is the root of a political system. For example, when human societies mostly had agricultural economies, there were no democracies and the political systems were based on monarchy and landlordism. However, as the societies moved to industrialized economies there was a shift towards democracy. Thus, economy to a great extent decides the form and nature of the political system and, therefore, instability economic growth into unstable political order and stable one must be birth to stable political order.

It can be observed that the societies where the people are mostly poor and do not have the facilities of life, there are more chances of political upheavals. The discontented people, suffering from destitution would ultimately arise to overthrow the political order and would never respect such a system. Resultantly, it can be said that the societies that are economically unstable are more prone to big revolutions, disturbances and chaos. The third world countries can be observed in this regard. As the people are poor, do not have basic requirements of life and suffer from unemployment, they are more vulnerable to be the cause of instability. As the poor people are used to be involved in scruffy activities to earn a living, the countries are in turmoil.

In Afghanistan insecurity has been influencing the economic life to a large extent. As insecurity has been overwhelmingly influencing the country, the development in the basic infrastructure has been marred. The low and uncertain conditions of the business market had made the international investors to think thousand times before they take an initiative to start their businesses in the country. Though there are great opportunities in Afghanistan and the country is blessed with different types of mineral and other natural resources, the economic infrastructure has not been able to get enough attention. Apart from that there are other factors as well that have been influencing the economic system of Afghanistan. The unsustainable and unfeeling business environment have turned the country into a failed state. The business owners and businessmen are not feeling sure if they should invest in all the sectors and they do not see positive prospects of their businesses. As a result, the country has been overlooking the investment in the country, it is clearly visible that the investment in the country has been limited. The political stability has been affected by the political instability in the country. The political situation has been a major reason for the country to stay in a state of stagnation.

Stability in Economy Ensures Political Constancy
