1 World Bank

The World Bank’s (WBG) operations in Afghanistan have been severely impacted by the Taliban’s resurgence, the worsening security situation, and the development of the COVID-19 pandemic. The former president of the World Bank Group, David Malpass, had warned the country that it had to be fully engaged in the fight against the Taliban, who had returned to power in Afghanistan. The Taliban’s resurgence has led to significant dislocations, with millions of people fleeing their homes and seeking refuge in neighboring countries. The Taliban have also been accused of human rights abuses, including violence against women, girls, and minorities. The impacts of the pandemic have added to the challenges faced by the country, exacerbating existing food security and health crises. The World Bank has responded to these challenges by providing financial support, technical assistance, and knowledge sharing to help Afghanistan recover from the impacts of the pandemic and the Taliban’s resurgence. The World Bank’s strategy in Afghanistan is to focus on improving the lives of the poor and vulnerable, providing access to basic services, and supporting economic recovery and stability. The Bank has emphasized the importance of gender equality and women’s empowerment, recognizing the critical role that women play in building a peaceful and prosperous future for the country. The World Bank’s operations in Afghanistan are guided by the Afghanistan National Development Strategy (ANDS), which is the country’s national development strategy for 2019-2023. The ANDS aims to achieve inclusive and sustainable growth, reduce poverty and inequality, and improve the quality of life for all Afghans.

2 Iran's Chabahar Port

Iran’s development of the port of Chabahar is a strategic move aimed at enhancing Iran’s economic and political influence in the region. The port is situated on the Gulf of Oman, providing a gateway to the Indian Ocean and the Arabian Sea. Iran has invested heavily in the port, with plans to expand its capacity and improve its connectivity with other countries. This strategic location makes Chabahar a key port for regional trade and commerce, particularly given the ongoing tensions between Iran and the United States, which have limited Iran’s access to international markets. The port’s development is also significant because it has the potential to boost Iran’s economy, create jobs, and attract foreign investment. However, the port’s development has been hampered by sanctions imposed by the United States, which have limited Iran’s ability to engage in trade and investment.
